He said the relations between Austria and France had been on the best possible footing ever since Austria relinquished the Italian territories, and the interests and intentions of the two countries were identical. Alluding to the Eastern policy, he said he would not insist on the programme of 1867, but leave it to the option of Turkey to follow his counsels regarding concessions to the Christians; on this point he would bring no pressure to bear. He declared that he had honestly striven to establish more cordial relations with Prussia; but his efforts not having been met in a similar spirit, he had been unsuccessful. He closed with a strong defence of the general policy of the Imperial Government. The Prime Minister's speech was received with great satisfaction.

THE CABLE CELEBRATION.

Jubilee at Duxbury, Mass.—A Great Crowd and Gathering of Distinguished Gentlemen—The Banquet, Toasts and Speeches—Congratulatory Messages.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

DUXBURY, Mass., Tuesday, July 27.

The celebration of the landing of the French Atlantic Cable on the Duxbury shore has been substantially a success. The weather has been delightful, the sun dispersing a heavy sea fog in the morning, and judiciously tempering his rays through the remainder of the day. The whole town was alive and jubilant at an early hour, the preparations for the dinner on Abraham's Hill, and the decorations of the various public and private buildings, receiving the aid of nearly every inhabitant. Many of the citizens of the wealthier class kept open house and welcomed all who chanced to come to well-spread tables, and, indeed, all classes were hospitable according to their means and condition. The decorations were not very numerous or elaborate, the past quiet and uneventful life of the village making few demands upon the glories of flags and bunting, these articles were evidently difficult to obtain.

The scene at Abraham's Hill, however, was full of interest and animation at an early hour. On the summit of the eminence was erected a mammoth tent within which places were laid for about six hundred guests. The flags of England, France and America waved gracefully over the canvas banqueting hall, and above a crowd of nearly five thousand people thickly grouped over the surface of the hill, and presenting an animated and picturesque appearance.

The first train arrived at Kingston at 10:10 A. M., conveying Mayor SHURTLEFF, of Boston; Judge THOMAS RUSSELL, Collector of the Port of Boston; Sir JAMES ANDERSON, Dr. GEO. B. LORING, together with other prominent citizens of the State. Every vehicle and horse that the stables of Duxbury could furnish was hastily pressed into the service of the day. A dense throng of teams and drivers, waiting for patrons, covered the open space in front of the station, and, as soon as the train stopped, all these vehicles were eagerly seized upon by the passengers. After an hour's plowing through the sand, the visitors were safely landed at their destination, many of the most distinguished going directly to Rouse's Hummock, where the cable and the instruments for working it were examined.

A congratulatory message was sent Mr. MOTLEY, the American Minister in England, while similar messages of congratulation were respectively received by Mayor SHURTLEFF and the Mayor of New-York from the Prefect of Paris. The operators are now able to transmit twenty-five words a minute between Duxbury and St. Pierre, and six words a minute between Duxbury and Brest, and when a thorough working condition is obtained it is expected that fifteen words a minute will be the average rate of speed over the entire line. It was the intention to have the cable extended from the Hummock to the banqueting tent, where it was hoped messages might be sent during the dinner to and from Brest, but the labor of conveying the wire over the intervening marsh was so great that the project did not succeed.

It was announced that the dinner would take place at 2 o'clock, but some of the invited guests remained so long at the Hummock that it was 3 o'clock when the exercises at the table were begun. These were opened by prayer, and a few remarks by Mr. S. M. GUYFORD, the President of the day. Then an hour was spent in disposing of the viands with which the tables were laden, and immediately thereafter the speech-making began. Before the first regular toast was proposed, the President made a short congratulatory address, in which he warmly welcomed those who had carried out the great work, the completion of which they were met to celebrate. The regular toasts were then offered in the following order:

"The Town of Duxbury. Its inhabitants, the descendants of the Pilgrim heroes, who planted on this very spot the seeds of our peerless and noble American civilization, perpetuating the memories of CARVER, of BRADFORD, of STANDISH, and BRADFORD, and WINSLOW, and OLDEN, attest their unbroken lineage by extending an enthusiastic and fraternal welcome to those who have achieved so magnificent an enterprise in the interests of the largest material prosperity and on behalf of the unity of the human race." Responded to by Mr. O. B. THOMAS, a native of the town.

2. "The State of Massachusetts"—Responded to by Hon. GEO. O. BRADTON, in the absence of Governor CLAFLIN, who sent a letter of regrets.

3. "The President of the United States"—Responded to by Hon. THOMAS RUSSELL.

4. "The City of Boston. Responded to by Mayor SHURTLEFF, who said that Boston rejoiced in the success of an enterprise which united the interests and welfare of the New World to that which had given birth to their forefathers more than two and a half centuries ago. He hoped that this union of continents and people would advance universal peace and the true civilization and lasting happiness of mankind. He then alluded in terms of praise to the example of the Pilgrim Fathers, which, he hoped, would be followed by those of the present day, who represent in the paths of duty and good government.

5. "Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland." Responded to by "God Save the Queen," by the band and chorus by the company.

6. "His Majesty VICTOR EMMANUEL, King of Italy." Responded to by Mr. DAY, of New-York.

7. "The French Atlantic Cables, uniting two continents; may it be to all time only a medium of good-will and promoter of international peace, peace as serene and undisturbed as that of the still ocean depths through which it holds its course." Responded to by Sir JAMES ANDERSON, who referred to his connection with Atlantic cables since they had been laid, and said that in all gatherings like the present he had never seen one that equalled it in the warmth of its welcome. He had no claim personally to any honor for the executive position of the work of laying the cable, his part as Superintendent in behalf of the Company was of a different kind and required different duties, and he was extremely sorry that his colleagues were not present that they might know that a country in the world would give them such a welcome as the State of Massachusetts. After a brief allusion to the Pilgrim Fathers he said that the Atlantic Cable was indebted more to his friend CYRUS W. FIELD than to any other man now living. No man knew better the intrinsic energy of Mr. FIELD. Although he heard rumors that he had opposed this cable in many ways, it would be strange if he hadn't; for Mr. FIELD and his friends had embarked large sums of money in the other cable, and would defend the enterprise where he had placed his opinion. So far as honorable opposition went they would not regard it as anything, because they themselves would do just the same. He had seen it said that certain opposition had been made to the landing of the cable it might be due to the same kind of enterprise, perhaps to Mr. FIELD and his colleagues, but he did not care for that. He was quite sure that the American people would pay his majesty, and that they would not allow any company to spend a million of money to unite two great continents together without giving them fair show. At least he believed it would be weak and foolish on the part of the Company to ask for undue sympathy or partiality. If they could not stand on their own well as the river Company or faster, they had no right to the public support, and would not get it, whatever the public sympathy might be. The cable was, therefore, laid as a purely commercial enterprise. Every right thinking person treated that it would remain so. God forbid that it might ever be used as a weapon of war. After again thanking them for their courtesy to him, he said he was proud that he had so many friends in America. If not more, then in his own country. He was proud to be able to say that probably by this time next year they would be able to communicate from California to Calcutta in a few minutes. He was returning thanks on behalf of gentlemen who had the real, responsible charge of laying the Cable, which was severer labor than that of seven years of, and had ended physically. Weary they had gone to Niagara and other places to recruit. He deeply regretted their absence. On their behalf he again thanked them.

8. "The Boston Board of Trade—Commerce in all ages the pioneer of a newer civilization, it has the electric telegraph, its most potent and cunning ally."—Responded to by Hon. E. S. TOBEY.

The President announced that a toast had been put into his hands composed by an old lady 88 years of age, the widow of old GEORGE LORING, and written in a singularly close and steady hand. It was as follows: "In memory of the past generation of shipmasters and shipbuilders. May the electric spark now kindled so animate the coming generation that it may worthily fill the place of the past, is the wish of an old settler." Responded to by Dr. GEO. B. LORING.

10. "Science; with imperial thought and invincible power it subdues the wildest and most fearful elements of nature, and binds them to the service of humanity." Responded to by Hon. CHAS. LEVI WOODBURY.

Mr. GEORGE PRAZAR, a former resident of Duxbury, offered the following toast:

"The seeds of the Mayflower, though planted in New-England's cold December, have germinated, taken root, and flourished, until their fruits are known the world over."

The President then announced the first message over the land telegraphic line from Boston to Duxbury, as follows:

The Franklin Telegraph Company sends greeting to the Cable Telegraph Company, and hopes that the marriage which has just been completed between France and the United States will be a happy and a fruitful one, and that neither party will ever sue for a divorce.

This concluded the speech-making, and soon after the company separated, most of the guests returning to Boston in a special train which left Kingston at 8 o'clock.

The festivities were closed in the evening by a moderate display of fireworks, and by entertainments at the residences of private citizens. To-morrow the cable will be connected with the old Bank building, from whence the land telegraph line to Boston is already in successful operation. A letter has been received from the Secretary of the Treasury admitting the cable free of duty.

Negro Riot in Charleston, S. C.—The Military Called Out.

A negro riot, which at one time threatened very serious consequences, occurred last night on the occasion of the departure of a visiting Base-Ball Club from Savannah. As the Club was leaving in procession for the Savannah boat they were attacked with sticks, stones and brickbats by a mob of several hundred men. Several shots were fired on both sides. Mayor PILLSBURY was on the ground, but it is said he was powerless to quell the riot, and was compelled to call on Major OGLESBY for the assistance of the United States troops. The Club was then escorted to the boat between platoons of the Eighth Infantry, followed by a large crowd of yelling and infuriated negroes, throwing stones, and compelling the soldiers at intervals to face about, and threaten to fire. Several persons were wounded, mostly members of the colored band. The affair causes intense indignation among the whites.

WASHINGTON.

The Revenue Troubles in Georgia—The Recent Accident on the Pacific Railroad—Important to Liquor Dealers—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, July 27.

These dispatches last evening contained information of the resistance by disorderly parties to the execution of the Internal Revenue laws in a portion of the State of Georgia. Commissioner DELANO received dispatches from that section to-day informing him that General TERRY had dispatched a few military companies into the riotous districts, and in a few days we shall doubtless hear of the reign of peace there as in other sections of the country.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

The editor of the Star, of this city, writes to that journal in reference to the recent accident on the Pacific Railroad, and to the line in general, as follows:

"Resuming our trip the next morning, we passed cautiously over the scene of the recent disaster, where the wreck of the train lay dumped in inextricable confusion on both sides of the road. Within the next ten miles we passed the point where a smash-up occurred to a freight train from Sacramento—the giving way of one of the quicksand embankment from the tremendous floods. These accidents are such as any railroad is liable to; but the Pacific Railroad, from its national character, will be subject to sharp censure if it does not take something more than ordinary precautions to prevent them. Thus, in the case of these accidents, the usual hand-car inspection of the road was made after the rain, but at night, when the wash in the embankment was not seen. It will doubtless be found requisite to have the road patrolled on foot, especially during heavy floods at points where the embankment is of the treacherous nature. The Company besides should make some adequate provision for conveying passengers in case of a break down, to some place where catables can be obtained, or else should take provisions to them. It is fair to state in behalf of the Company that they are making great exertions to bring the road up to the mark in all respects, widening embankments, substituting substantial culverts and bridges for temporary ones, straightening the track, reducing grades, &c., and I see no reason to doubt that it will soon be made one of the safest, as it is now one of the easiest riding, in the country."

IMPORTANT TO LIQUOR DEALERS.

The following has been sent to General PLEASONTON:

WASHINGTON, July 26, 1869.

SIR: Your letter of the 16th inst., referring to spirits found in packages containing five gallons or more, in the hands of retail dealers, without the marks or stamps required by law, has been received. You refer also to the practice common to this class of dealers, of emptying packages of spirits which they purchase into third casks which bear no stamp, mark or brands.

In relation to the subject of stand casks, it has recently been held that although their use is not to be denied, the emptying of spirits from an original package into them, if containing ten gallons or more, for sale, is a change of package, to all legal intents, and brings the party making the change within the meaning of section 47 of the act of July 20, 1868.

Section 37 provides for the forfeiture of packages of spirits containing more than five gallons without having the marks and stamps thereon which the law requires. Packages containing five gallons and less do not come within this provision.

But inasmuch as this decision regarding the stand casks and stand casks, has been quite recently made and is not generally known, before resorting to extreme measures you will please give notice to parties using them that they must either abandon their use or comply with the provisions of section 47, by having them inspected and gauged and marked or branded as required by that section, as often as they are filled. Their use should be discontinued by holding the dealers to strict compliance with the law.

Very respectfully,
(Signed) JOSIAH GIVEN,
Deputy Commissioner.
A. PLEASONTON, Esq., Collector Fourth District, New-York.

IMPORTANT TO ADVERTISERS.

The following letter to an inquirer will explain itself:

TREASURY OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, July 26, 1869.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 21st inst., in which you inquire, "How near a United States greenback can be copied for an advertisement without making it a criminal offence?" I have to say that it is impossible to give an answer to your inquiry which shall cover all cases. The second section of the act of Feb. 9, 1867, forbids, under a penalty of $100, the use of advertisements "in the likeness or similitude" of a United States note; but this clause should constitute an infringement of the law in any particular case would be a matter for judicial decision, in case the person offending were proceeded against under that act. Should you have any particular case in view, in making your inquiry, by forwarding a copy of the advertisement to the Solicitor of the Treasury, who is the law officer of the Department, you would probably obtain an opinion as to whether it falls within the terms of the act.

Very respectfully, J. R. TUTTLE,
Assistant Treasurer of the United States.

THE ANTI-RENT WAR.

Riot in Greenbush—A Sheriff's Posse Resisted, and Several Persons Seriously Wounded.

From the Troy Times, July 27.

Late last evening rumors of a renewal of the anti-rent war in this county, and of the wounding of several men during an affray between the officers and tenants, were rife throughout the city, but no reliable particulars of the affair could be obtained. The affair was most unexpected. A clap of thunder from a clear sky could not be more startling than this reopening of the old anti-rent struggle at a time when all excitement in regard to the subject had passed away, and it was supposed that the troubles of the anti-renters were, to a certain extent, at an end. But this murderous affray now reopens the agitation, and as there is great excitement in the region where it occurred, it is impossible to predict what will be the result. The following is the Albany Argus report of the affair:

The troubles which grew out of the Van Rensselaer leases, and which several times in former years necessitated the calling out of the militia to overcome forcible resistance in Albany and Columbia Counties, have not yet ceased, notwithstanding the rights of VAN RENSSELAER have been vindicated at all points by the Courts, in suits between him and the tenants. The latest instance of forcible resistance to a legal process, with bloody results, occurred yesterday upon the farm of WILLIAM WHITBECK, who lives just east of the village of Greenbush, where a writ of ejectment had been issued against WHITBECK, and that on Tuesday last, about 4 o'clock P. M., Deputy Sheriff GRIGGS, of Rensselaer County, served the process upon the premises in possession of the farm. Colonel WALTER S. CHURCH, of this city, who some years since acquired the Van Rensselaer title to this and other manorial lands by purchase, Colonel CHURCH placed three men in possession, with directions to hold the property.

On Saturday last WHITBECK returned with a party of some twenty-five men, drove the opposite party off and again took possession. Yesterday morning Deputy Sheriff GRIGGS again proceeded to the scene of the disturbance, taking with him but one man. He found WHITBECK there with a dozen men, who ordered the Sheriff to leave, threatening resistance in case he attempted to execute his process. He then retreated to this city and obtained a posse consisting of Deputy Sheriffs LEONARD WHITBECK, of this city, and WILLIAM SOUTHARD, of Rensselaerville, PATRICK MCGRAW, THOMAS MULLIGAN, JOHN WOODS, two brothers named MULLER, GIDEON MCMENARY and others. They proceeded to the farm and ordered WHITBECK and his party to leave. WHITBECK thereupon drew his revolver, containing four chambers, and declared that he would not leave unless they carried his dead body from the field. The Sheriff's posse then fired, and, as they did so, WHITBECK fired and shot Deputy Sheriff LEONARD WHITBECK. The ball took effect in the lower part of the back, on the right side, opposite the third lumber vertebra, and penetrated obliquely downward and inward, through the large muscles and the soft part of the loins. It is feared the ball is lodged in the cavity of the stomach. He bled freely, and, although he was comfortable last evening, there is danger that the wound may prove fatal. He was brought to his home in this city, No. 267 South Pearl-street.

As soon as WHITBECK fired, the fight became general, WHITBECK and his party firing revolvers and muskets, and the Sheriff's party defending themselves with their fists, until THOMAS MULLIGAN succeeded in wresting the pistol from WHITBECK's hand, and shot him in the head, inflicting a slight wound. The Sheriff's party were unarmed, and although he feared before starting that weapons would be necessary, by the advice of Colonel CHURCH and others, who did not participate a formidable resistance, he was disturbed from the fact that WILLIAM WHITBECK, JR., had a pistol, which he borrowed on the way out, but it was not loaded. The Sheriff's party were forced to retire, leaving the other party in possession, who continued to shoot while the former were leaving and carrying off their wounded.

In addition to the wounds received by Deputy Sheriff WHITBECK, the following men were wounded: WM. SOUTHARD, wounded in the foot by a blow from a club, and in the back of the head by a pistol shot; he was not dangerously hurt, and was able to be about last evening; JOHN WOODS, a moulder, living in Bennett-street, received three bullet wounds—one in the groin, one in the thigh and one in the knee, and was struck by a club on the head; he is not, however, dangerously injured. GIDEON MCMENARY received a pistol shot in the ankle joint, and was slightly wounded. Deputy Sheriff GRIGGS was shot five times—twice in the thigh, once in the arm, (the ball passing through a memorandum book half an inch thick, and lodging in his side,) and after he fell was shot through the mouth, the ball knocking out a tooth, lodging in the roof of the mouth toward the eye; he was also struck on the forehead by a club after he was shot; this is the most dangerous of his wounds. WILLIAM WHITBECK received a slight scalp wound in the back of the head.

Colonel CHURCH was rallying his party to WHITBECK's, when he was apprised of what had happened, and met a portion of the wounded men returning. He immediately sent for physicians to assist the wounded. Drs. ARMSBY and WHITBECK and Dr. VANDERVEER attended Sheriff WHITBECK and SOUTHARD. Dr. MOSHER and an attendant went to Bloomingrove to attend Sheriff GRIGGS; they extracted three balls, leaving two, which they were unable to find. Dr. O'LEARY took three balls from WOODS. It is wonderful that in such a desperate encounter, men were not killed on the spot. Indeed, only two, Messrs. GRIGGS and WHITBECK, are considered in danger.

Warrants will, of course, be issued for the arrest of WILLIAM WHITBECK and his confederates, and they will doubtless be held to await the result of the injuries of the wounded men.

SHERIFF GRIGGS.

There are rumors this morning to the effect that Deputy Sheriff GRIGGS died last night of his wounds, but we are unable to trace them to a reliable source. It is believed, however, that he cannot recover, as it is said that he was shot in five different places. It is said by members of his party that he was in the act of retreating, when he stumbled and fell. While down, one of the anti-renters rushed up to where he lay and deliberately fired several shots into his body. Subsequently, the retreating party saw the anti-renters lift Sheriff GRIGGS up and convey him into the house or barn. Sheriff GRIGGS has been deputy of the county for many years, under successive administrations. His name is WILLARD GRIGGS, and he resides in Sandlake. During former anti-rent outbreaks he bore a prominent part, and had been repeatedly fired at, but was never wounded before. He is about 60 years of age.

WILLIAM WHITBECK.

Mr. WHITBECK, whom the Sheriff's party went to dispossess of his place yesterday, and at whose house the bloody affray occurred, is one of the prominent citizens of the county, and is connected with some of the most conspicuous politicians in this section. He is a son-in-law of BENJAMIN DENNISON, and a brother-in-law of THOMAS B. SIMMONS and Supervisor JAMES MILLER, of Greenbush. We believe he has himself been a member of the Board of Supervisors of the county. He has heretofore been considered a quiet, law-abiding citizen; and it is believed by those who know him best that he must have been induced to take the bloody steps he has by injudicious legal advice, as he is probably the last man in the world to take the law in his own hands, and carry resistance to it to such extreme measures, unless he had been advised thereto by those in whose judgment he placed implicit confidence. However this may be, he will find that in the affair of yesterday he has wholly overstepped the bounds which the dictates of his own judgment ought to have prescribed as the limit of his conduct.

AT THE JAIL.

No report of the occurrence has been received by the officers at the jail in this city. Sheriff FONDA is absent from the city. It is thought he may be at the scene of the disturbance, but nothing is known of his movements. The officers at the jail decline to take any steps in the matter until the Sheriff returns. Several citizens and officials of the county called at the Sheriff's office this morning, and advised that legal measures be taken at once to enforce the supremacy of the law in the insurrectionary district, but the entire matter will have to be held in abeyance until Sheriff FONDA returns. He cannot return and act a moment too soon. While all must sympathize to a certain extent with the anti-renters in their struggles against the feudalism of the past, still the law must be upheld and its ministers protected in its enforcement. They cannot be shot down with impunity; and the public will hold to a strict accountability the authorities who may attempt to evade their duty in this or any similar assault upon the lives of citizens.

LATEST FROM THE SCENE OF WAR.

Later advices from the scene give additional particulars of the affair. As the Sheriff's posse advanced up the road they encountered skirmishers from the enemy, who were on the look-out. The skirmishers retreated to the main entrenchment. Finally the Sheriff reached the premises. WILLIAM WHITBECK was in front of the spectators, some of whom were whittling. Deputy Sheriff GRIGGS approached WILLIAM WHITBECK, and demanded possession of the farm under the process which he held. WHITBECK drew a revolver, and declared he would relinquish his hold upon the property only with his life. Just then a rupture between one of WITBECK's sons and one of the Sheriff's posse occurred. Blows were struck, and in a minute a general fight was in progress. Pistols, stones and clubs were freely used. The anti-renters being prepared fought with advantage. The attack was so sudden and unexpected that the Sheriff's posse were taken aback, and the result of the engagement was that the Sheriff's party were driven from the ground in confusion and disarray, and the anti-renters left masters of the situation. The fight lasted only about ten minutes, yet it was a regular hand to hand encounter, and was desperately contested on both sides. In the affair six persons are known to have been wounded, but it is likely that some others were hurt. One account has it that eight persons were wounded. In addition to those reported wounded last night are Special Deputies SOUTHARD and GIDEON MCMENRMY, both of Albany, as well as WM. WHITBECK, the person sought to be dispossessed. Deputy Sheriff GRIGGS and Deputy WHITBECK are seriously wounded, and are not expected to survive their injuries. The first named is reported dead, though as he was left on the ground his fate is uncertain.

POLITICAL.

TENNESSEE POLITICS.

Secretary Boutwell's Letter Indorsing General Stokes.

The letter from Secretary BOUTWELL to General W. B. STOKES, the Radical candidate for Governor of Tennessee, a brief synopsis of which was given in our dispatches a few days ago, is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 15, 1869.

Hon. W. B. Stokes, Nashville, Tennessee:

MY DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your letter relating to the political contest in Tennessee. I am greatly interested in your success, believing that the future political character and general prosperity of the State depend largely upon the continuance of the Republican Party in power.

It is quite likely that Mr. SENTER is receiving the support of members of the Republican Party, but it is certain that he is also receiving the unanimous support of enemies of the Republican Party; the enemies of the Congressional plan of reconstruction, and of the principles embodied in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. The interests of the loyal people of Tennessee, both white and black, especially the interests of black people, are to be promoted, and the rights of all are to be made secure by your success. The platform of the party is not a good one as indicating the best purpose to be obtained from a knowledge of the political character and opinions of the men who control the party. I am sure that you, and those who are supporting you in Tennessee, will sustain the principles of the Republican Party, but we have a right to expect that those who for eight years have opposed the Government and resisted measures for its reconstruction are now to yield cheerful support to the Republican Party.

Very truly yours, GEO. S. BOUTWELL.

Interference by the Washington Authorities in the Purely Local Quarrel Deprecated.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE TRAGEDIES OF ÆSCHYLOS. With a Biographical Essay. By E. H. PLUMPTRE, M. A. 2 vols. London: STRAHAN. New-York: ROUTLEDGE.

We are glad to welcome this translation of the tragedies of ÆSCHYLOS, from the pen of Mr. PLUMPTRE, who, in his previously published translation of SOPHOCLES, had shown that he combined in full measure the critical scholarship, the true poetic genius and the thorough and intimate knowledge of Hellenic culture, politics, literature, mythology and philosophy so necessary for the task. Well known for his valuable contributions to theology, both controversial and practical, and also to religious verse—the latter, as one of his critics has said, clothing "a scholar's reading of the religion of the times, in the rhythm and music of a poetical mind"—we are glad to find that he still has time to devote to the work of placing the great tragic poets of Greece before the public in a shape which enables non-classical readers to appreciate, as far as possible, their beauty and grandeur, while the ripest of scholars and the most devoted student of the tragedians must derive fresh enjoyment from them. Led, as he says, by the interest he found in the translation of SOPHOCLES, he determined to enter upon the even more difficult task of translating ÆSCHYLOS on the same plan that he had pursued with regard to the younger dramatist. He has adhered to the same rule that he pursued in the former case, and for the Choral Odes he has used "each unrhymed metre, observing the strophic and antistrophic arrangement as seemed most analogous in their general effect to those of the original," while for the sake of those "who cannot abandon their preference for the form with which they are more familiar," he has added in an appendix rhymed versions of the chief odes in the Orestean trilogy. PALEY's Oxford edition of 1861 has been followed throughout, and his readings of the "corrupt passages" accepted, so that critical readers are provided with a uniform standard by which to estimate the fidelity of the translation in many of those passages in which the full sense depends so much upon the reading adopted.

Professor PLUMPTRE, as in the case of his translation of SOPHOCLES, has prefaced it by a life of the poet, putting together the disjecta membra of the few known facts of his career, and the anecdotes and allusions in contemporary authors which form the only materials for a biographer, and based upon them, as far as practicable, a review of the events of his life, and their influences upon his mind and temperament, knowledge of the world and religious views. In this we are inclined to think he has succeeded to an extent greater than any previous biographer or essayist, and, apart from the merits of his translation, the prefatory memoir is a most valuable contribution to classical criticism. Professor PLUMPTRE points out how the whole character of the poet was moulded by his birth and early bringing up among the Eupatrids, or old nobility of Attica, as a time, moreover, when pride of caste, ancient descent, hatred of "new people" and traditions were stronger among them than at any other period. Numerous passages throughout his writings prove how deeply the intensely aristocratic surroundings of his youth had affected both his general sympathies and political proclivities. All that we know of his political career tends to confirm this impression. And while his nurture was calculated to imbue him with haughty and aristocratic ideas, it is an ingenious, if not well authenticated supposition, that traces in his name—the diminutive of aischros, signifying "little and ugly"—a reference to some physical infirmity or deformity which may have had the effect of engendering bitterness of spirit and irritability, just as the same cause produced similar results in Lord BYRON, different as were the respective natures and sympathies of the two poets. With regard to the supposed influences on ÆSCHYLOS of his local connection with Eleusis, and his early initiation into the Eleusinian mysteries, as to the nature of which such widely divergent views are entertained, Professor PLUMPTRE hesitates to pronounce any decided opinion, but hazards the theory that in the days of ÆSCHYLOS they may have embodied a deep religious meaning, calculated deeply to impress an imagination like that of ÆSCHYLOS, and that it was only subsequently that they degenerated into fantastic symbolism and obscene rites. Even the fact of his initiation has been disputed, although the disturbance recorded to have occurred when he introduced a representation of certain of the rites upon the stage, is strong presumptive evidence of his acquaintance with them. Great weight is attached by Professor PLUMPTRE to the influence upon ÆSCHYLOS of EPIMENIDES, the great Cretan anchorite, poet, prophet, seer, and miracle-worker, who had visited Athens some seventy years before his birth, and in the fragmentary accounts of whose teachings that has come down to us, can be traced the germs of that belief in inexorable fate, in hereditary expiation of crime, in transmitted pollution from father to son clinging to the family on account of outrages against the gods, which is so fully developed in the Orestean trilogy, while the part taken by EPIMENIDES in introducing at Athens the worship of the Cthonian goddesses—the Eumenides or Furies—who play so important a part in the supernatural action of the tragedies of ÆSCHYLOS, tends strongly to confirm the theory. His ardent defence of the sacred authority of the Court of Areiopagus over the religious worship of the State, when threatened by what seemed to him the revolutionary infidelity of the age, is another proof of how thoroughly he had been impressed by the ecstatic teachings of the Cretan and the school which he had founded. We have not space to follow Professor PLUMPTRE through his careful arrangement of all the known events in the poet's life, or the acute deductions which he draws from apparently insignificant facts, nor his sketch—meagre as the materials are for such a task—of the foundation of the Greek tragic drama upon the study of the Homeric literature, and its growth as developed by PHRYNICHUS, CHŒRILUS and others, until ÆSCHYLOS, by his employment of the events of the day as materials for his dramas, and his introduction of magnificent spectacular and sensational stage effects, achieved a triumph over all his rivals, to be in turn dethroned from his pinnacle of greatness by a poet, who owed less to the native fire of imagination, passion and dark superstition, and more to literary culture and artistic polish. We wish we were able to transfer to our pages some of the many admirable touches of criticism which are scattered through Professor PLUMPTRE's essay—such as that, for instance, in which he refers to the influence on the romance and imagination of the Greeks which the adventurous voyages of discovery in far and strange countries had exercised, and apro os to the story of the wanderings of Io in Prometheus and draws an analogy between the feelings of wonder and awe with which legends such as those related by HERODOTUS were regarded, and the same feelings in a later day and other circumstances. "What the Spanish Main, and El Dorado, and the 'still vexed Bermoothes,' and Prester John were to the Elizabethan dramatist, that the one-eyed Arimaspi, and the long-lived, happy Hyperborei, and the Gorgons and the Cyclops were to the dramatic poets of Athens." Neither can we attempt to analyze his subtle and yet profound dissertation on the theology of ÆSCHYLOS, in which he applies himself to the question, "What did ÆSCHYLOS believe as to the will of God, the government of the universe and the destinies of mankind?" and justifies beyond question the inclusion of such a question within the province of true criticism. The justification is evidently in answer to the theories of a certain school of critics, but when we consider that the myth of Prometheus as accepted and developed by ÆSCHYLOS, is "as all thinkers have felt, the noblest of the 'unconscious prophecies of heathenism,' and among the profoundest anticipations of an eternal truth," we scarcely see its necessity. Certainly we rejoice that Professor PLUMPTRE was not deterred by the arguments of the school of critics to which he refers from entering upon this most deeply interesting branch of his subject.

It is not our present intention to enter into any detailed examination of the translations which Professor PLUMPTRE has prefaced with so admirable an essay, or to do more than indicate their general characteristics. We have already mentioned that he has discarded rhyme, and in the Choral Odes, has adopted such irregular metres as seemed in his judgment most fitted to express the fierce passion, wild lamentations, soothing superstition, and mysterious horror so widely diffused through them, and made vocal with such marvelous power in the rugged rhythm of the original. They are, of course, the crux of every translator, both as scholar and poet, and it is in them, as it seems to us, that Professor PLUMPTRE has achieved his most signal success, rather than in the less impassioned passages—although even in most conversational dialogues he has shown rare skill in preserving the dramatic individuality of each character by paraphrasing their respective peculiarities of style and diction. As might be anticipated, the Orestean trilogy and Prometheus have naturally exercised a paramount fascination upon the translator's mind and imagination, and it is on them that he has evidently centered his utmost zeal and care rather than upon the Seven Against Thebes, or the Persians, in which historic events, and more purely human dramatic action, take the place of religious mysteries and supernatural influence over the affairs of men. But whether it is the wailings of Cassandra, the ravings of Orestes under the torments inflicted by the Furies, or the exquisite natural imagery in the Odes to Prometheus, or the battle pieces of the Seven Against Thebes, that he reproduces, he is always faithful, always a poet, graceful, nervous or rugged in diction as the occasion requires, always felicitous in paraphrase where paraphrase is unavoidable, and always earnest in his single-minded desire to place his author before English readers as he really is, rather than to exhibit his own skill or display his own individuality.

THE COMING CENSUS.

Value of Census Statistics—Deficiency in the Government—Necessity to Determine Residence—Census of 1870—Its Result in the East, West and South—Growth of the Country.

From Our Own Correspondent.

THE BENCHES, Monday, July 26, 1869.

The Census Committee of Congress have had many and arduous sessions at Washington since the adjournment of Congress, and they have very properly asked for information from those who were competent to give it. Such gentlemen as Dr. SNOW, of Rhode Island; Dr. HOUGHTON, of New-York; Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. YOUNG, and others, who understood the complications, relations of statistics, and the extreme difficulty of getting them accurately, are proper persons to consult. Enumerating the people and their ages is not the tenth part of the census work, nor is it the most difficult or the most important. We must enumerate the people decennially in order to comply with the terms of the Constitution; but the most difficult, and in some respects the most important part of statistics obtained by the Census are those relating to the industry and resources of the country. Political economy has always failed of exact results, for want of ascertaining the exact increments for given spaces of time, of the production, consumption, increased wealth and development of a country. These are the problems of statistics, and the importance of the results is so great that statistics is now raised to the level and value of an exact science. Why should a nation be involved in myths and confusions as to its most important elements when all mystery, confusion and doubt may be cleared away and everything exactly proven by a proper system of statistics? But our Government neither has, nor has had, such a system, and it may be long before it will have; because there are but few minds who understand the value or the nature of statistics, while the multitude of men really dislike and don't want to hear of them, because, like Paul's Epistles, they contain some things hard to understand, although these things are of inestimable value and importance. If I attempt now to show or illustrate certain great and invaluable facts by statements in the TIMES of half a dozen lines of figures, I shall probably lose half my readers for that article, and the other half will think that they have earned their information hardly by being compelled to read the figures. When the metaphysicians attempt to enlighten my ignorance on the transcendent problems of the human mind, I know that they are attempting to enlighten me by what they don't understand themselves. But I acknowledge the value of the instruction, because it involves a useful exercise of my intellectual faculties. I don't underrate such exercise; but, beyond all doubt, the growth and happiness of human society is involved in the evolution and production of its elements. These are ascertained by statistics, and the more true civilization advances the more statistics will advance as a science, and be valued as practical and useful.

Nothing more astonished me in the war, than the ignorance of statesmen and Generals on the resources, elements and even geography of the country. A thorough acquaintance with the country—such statistics, maps and treatises as ought to have been in the Departments of the Government—would have reduced the time and expense of the war to half of what they were. Statesmen are like the rest of mankind, divided into two classes—those who know, and those who only imagine. Unfortunately, ours have been largely of the latter class. But to the present business. One point, even in the enumeration of the people, is of great importance. This is, that an exact unit or test of residence shall be established. Without this the census will be greatly defective. You want to know exactly who are in the City of New-York. It is plain that you cannot do this by taking different days, or hours. You must fix one day and one hour at which the locality of each individual is to be determined. It is plain, also, that you must take one test, whatever it may be, to determine what is residence. The census is not taken to determine citizenship or suffrage, but it is taken to determine where and how many are the people of this nation. There is A. B., you say, belongs to New-York, but he is in Florida the day you take the census, and must be enumerated in Florida. But what shall be the test of residence? Really, it is the place where the person sleeps; but others say where he eats; others where he works; and others where he does business. But, in either case, there must be one test, and that test applied in one day, and one hour, or your census will be totally defective. I presume the Census Committee will make this matter right. But how will the census of 1870 compare with that of 1860? But little different in proportion or in direction of growth from what it has been during half a century. Statistics have proved that the elements of growth move on with great uniformity. The growth of this country, in the development of all its principal elements, is wonderfully uniform. The growth of population for half a century has varied but slightly from thirty-five per cent. decennially. But there is one thing quite remarkable in the growth of elements. Production has increased more rapidly than population. Hence the growth of wealth, which is nearly equivalent in ratio to the difference between the ratios of production and population. But let us see, now, what is likely to be the result in regard to population.

Since 1860 we have had one disturbing element—the war. But I do not believe (as I have said in the TIMES) that the interruption to the progress of the country made by the war was more than a small fraction. The immigration since 1860 has been about 2,000,000, and the natural growth of population was but little obstructed. A large number of those who died during the war would have died at home. The natural growth of numbers is about twenty-five per cent. decennially, and the growth by immigration from 1860 to 1869 was about ten per cent.; but the growth by immigration is falling off, pro rata, and the growth from 1869 to 1879 will not exceed seven per cent. I think, therefore, that the growth of population from 1860 to 1879 will not exceed thirty-two per cent., which will give 39,110,000. Suppose this too much and we call it 41,500,000; how will they be divided? In classes and in sections nearly as follows:

White	36,700,000
Colored	4,800,000
Native born	35,000,000
Foreign born	6,500,000
Eastern and Middle States	13,000,000
Late Confederate States	12,270,000
Western and Pacific States	16,130,000

The population of the new Western States increases by leaps and bounds. The decennial rate of increase in Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, will probably show under the census nine millions of people! This is a growth in numbers, wealth and productiveness which has no parallel in the history of the world. The States on the west bank of the Mississippi, viz.: Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, will probably grow at an equally rapid rate. These States had in the census of 1860, in round numbers, 2,160,000 people. They will have in the census of 1870 about 3,600,000. Their growth hereafter will be greater than it has. The great Valleys of the Missouri, the Kansas, the Nebraska and the Minnesota, offer the greatest temptations to farmers; while inexhaustible mines of iron, coal and lead furnish the elements of manufactures. A glance at the above table will show that this country cannot be governed by foreigners or by Roman Catholics. They are already beginning to form a less ratio of importance in the country than they have had. The German is antagonistic to the Irish; the negro is unlike both, and the Chinese, if he come, will be unlike either. In fine, the very freedom and charity which thus make this country an asylum for all nations, make it perfectly certain that they can never unite, in either politics or religion, against the Americanism of the nation. With all the immigration we have had for half a century, we are still the most homogeneous nation on earth. Thirty-five millions of people in this country are native-born and substantially of the same religion. The mass of Roman Catholics are foreigners, and their religion is foreign to the spirit and institutions of the country. If they would only recognize this fact, and conform more to American ideas, it would be much wiser than these attempts to impose on the country the ideas of the Middle Ages. The Catholics have, however, (to their credit,) become much more enlightened than in Europe, and time will make them more so. Demagogues are mistaken when they court the Catholic element, and they will soon find it out. The census of 1870 will open the eyes of many courtiers of popular opinion.

A VETERAN OBSERVER.

HEMPSTEAD PLAINS.

Important Action of the Town Authorities—They Formally Release all Claim to Mr. Harvey's $35,000 Deposit Money.

The town authorities of Hempstead are determined to secure the right of Mr. A. T. STEWART to the Hempstead Plains purchase, notwithstanding the efforts of his competitor, Mr. CHARLES T. HARVEY, to prevent a conveyance of the same. As the counsel of Mr. HARVEY have petitioned the Queens County Circuit Court to hear argument in relation to the legality of the votes cast at the late election in favor of Mr. STEWART's proposition, Judge ARMSTRONG, counsel for the town, and District-Attorney of Queens County, is determined that the matter shall be argued at that time, and that no vexatious delay or protracted lawsuit shall result from Mr. HARVEY's action. Judge HILTON, Mr. STEWART's counsel, will assist Judge ARMSTRONG in bringing the question to a final determination; so that the result of the litigation will be to fix the legal department of the Supreme Court on the transfer of the Plains, and so far as Mr. STEWART is concerned, to "make assurance doubly sure."

The people of Hempstead are deeply incensed at the course Mr. HARVEY has seen fit to pursue, and threaten vengeance against him for it. One gentleman, who officiated as Mr. HARVEY's agent at the late town election, was made the object of the objurgation, remember it was said, that HARVEY had begun a litigation, and that he was endeavoring to prevent a conveyance of the lands. It was not until the agent in question had given a solemn assurance that he was in no way connected with the litigation; that he never advised it—that he did not know anything of it—that he was allowed to remain in peace. As showing how little the Hempstead authorities care for Mr. HARVEY's threats to prevent a conveyance of the lands to Mr. STEWART, it may be stated that, yesterday morning, Hon. CARMAN COMELLIN, Town Clerk; Mr. TUNIS ONDERDONK, Clerk of Hempstead, and Judge ARMSTRONG, counsel for the town authorities, called at the office of the United States Trust Company in this City, and formally relinquished any claim, right or title the town of Hempstead may at any time have, to the money deposited in pursuance with that Company by Mr. HARVEY as an earnest of his desire to become the purchaser of the Plains, alleging at the same time that they were carrying out the express wish of their constituents—the freeholders of Hempstead—in declaring that Mr. A. T. STEWART was the legal and rightful purchaser of those lands. It is hardly to be supposed that in the face of these indices of disapproval of Mr. HARVEY's course, that gentleman will insist on pushing the issue before the Courts. As yet, however, he has given no evidence of abandoning the position he has taken in this respect. Judge HILTON, Mr. JENKINS, HARVEY's agent, and Mr. HARVEY's counsel were present when the formal release of the deposit money was made.

LABOR MOVEMENTS.

Proposed Strike of the German Tailors—A Meeting to be Held This Morning.

The Executive Committee appointed by the Central Committee of the German Tailors' Union, composed of those who are employed in the shop department, has completed its preparations for a general strike. They have issued a call calling upon the tailors residing in the vicinity to assemble at their respective headquarters on this morning, at 10 o'clock, and then proceed to the general headquarters, at No. 42 Avenue A, where the tailors residing in the City will assemble at 8 o'clock this morning. The price lists, previously prepared, will then be simultaneously submitted to the employers, and unless they return a satisfactory answer, work will be suspended at once. This tailors' organization is composed of ten unions, located in different parts of the City and vicinity. An advance of about forty per cent. will be demanded.

The German Central Workingmen's Union, which originated from the late German Workingmen's Festival, is steadily progressing, and is already composed of two dozen workingmen's and artisans' organizations, which are each represented by five delegates. The headquarters of the organization is the Stadtsen House, and at the last meeting the discussion in reference to the constitution was continued, and arrangements were made to have each Society represented at the approaching National Labor Convention in Philadelphia.

The Newark tailors employed in the "shop department" have determined to join the tailors of New-York and vicinity. The custom tailors and clothing cutters' organizations intend to aid the men in their strike, who are confident that they will succeed in enforcing the advance so as to increase the rate of wages to the standard price of three years ago.

The General German Workingmen who meet regularly at the Tenth Ward Hotel, discussing topics concerning the condition of the working man, and measures of reform, have elected a delegate to the Philadelphia Convention in the person of SIGISMUND MEYER. The German artisans and workingmen residing in Union Hill held a meeting and formed a temporary organization which is to be completed at the next meeting on Saturday.

THE TURF.

Trotting on the Fashion Course, Long Island.

The two trots announced to come off yesterday afternoon over this Course, did not take place, a heavy rain-storm prevailing about the time of starting, and rendering the Course so heavy that a postponement was indispensable.

To-day the great trot between Lady Thorn and Goldsmith Maid for $2,000, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, comes off on the Union Course, Long Island. This is a bona fide trial of speed; the veteran owner of Lady Thorn not being willing to venture, without a struggle, the sovereignty of the trotting turf, which his great mare so long held and so worthily won. The match in question was made last Friday on the Fashion Course; Mr. JACKMAN, the owner of Goldsmith Maid, claiming by his mare's victory over Kentucky Girl at Philadelphia, having exposed his belief that she could beat any horse or mare in the world in a race of mile heats in harness. The owner of Lady Thorn, Mr. JAMES D. MCMANUS, took exception to this, and offered to match the big bay mare against her for $2,000, mile heats, in harness—a proposition at once accepted by Mr. JACKMAN. Should the weather be propitious, there will be a large assemblage to view the contest, and rumor has it that the President purposes running up from Long Branch unattended, and becoming a quiet and uncontentious spectator of the race. The cars leave the Fulton and Williamsburg Ferries every five minutes for the Course, the race being set for 3 o'clock P. M.

Suicide in Central Park.

On Monday evening last an unknown man committed suicide in the Central Park by blowing his brains out with a pistol. When discovered by the Central Park Police the body, which was still warm, was lying on the back in one of the most secluded walks in the Park, and close beside it was an old-fashioned single-barrelled pistol; the stock being broken to pieces by the explosion of the weapon. The skull of the deceased was terribly shattered, and the walk was splashed with blood and brain matter. The deceased was apparently a German, about 27 years of age, had dark hair and eyes and smooth shaven face. He was neatly attired in a black alpaca coat, black cloth vest, gray pants, blue socks and gaiters, white linen shirt and collar, but no name or clue to his unknown were removed to the morgue, where, after a photograph of the features had been taken, they were exposed for identification. An inquest in the case will be held by Coroner ROLLINS.

THE FIRST WARD MURDER.

Fourth Day's Proceedings in the Trial of Policeman Matthew Campbell—Mr. Holmes' Opening—Testimony for the Defence.

The spacious Court-room of the Oyer and Terminer was filled yesterday morning long before the hour for opening the Court arrived. Aside from the numerous witnesses and the immediate friends and relatives of the respective parties, it was quite apparent that there was a great number of interested spectators from the First Ward, of this City. Owing to the stringent orders given by Mr. Justice CARDOZO, and the vigilance of the officers in attendance, the very best of order and decorum was preserved throughout the protracted session, although the thermometer marked up in the nineties, and the interest in the proceedings was so great that at times it seemed just ready to make itself heard and felt.

After waiting a short time for the arrival of Mr. CHARLES S. SPRENGER, one of the counsel for the defence, who had been unavoidably detained, Mr. RODY D. HOLMES opened the case in behalf of the prisoner. He said it was a matter for congratulation that twelve so intelligent gentlemen had been found to sit in the jury box. The law they must take from the Judge presiding. If the Judge erred in giving the law to the jury, there was a higher tribunal which would review those questions of law. The jurors, however, are the sole judges of the facts, and from them there is no appeal. It had been said by the learned District-Attorney that the prisoner at the bar was a minister of the law; on the night of the homicide he was the sole representative of the law. It had been said that he was in no higher position on that night than any commonwealth man. This was not so. Counsel referred to the Astor-place riots to show that policemen and the military stood in a different position from a private citizen. On that night of the 9d of July last, the prisoner at the bar stood in the relation of a protector and conservator of the public peace. Counsel referred to the condition of things in the different wards of the City. The Twenty-seventh Precinct, where the homicide occurred, comprises a large portion of the First Ward. There is no ward in the City more dangerous than this. Counsel had recently been informed that in the Twenty-seventh Precinct there are but three dwellings which are not tenement-houses. We see there every kind of vice except the more fashionable kinds of gambling. The lost women are there in swarms to seduce the sailor and to urge him to part with his hard earnings. The Fourth and Sixth Wards perhaps are in some respects equally filled with vagabonds and criminals. Two juries have already passed unfavorably upon the case of the prisoner at the bar. First, the Coroner's jury, who heard the evidence soon after the decease of Mr. LONG, and, secondly, the Grand Jury of the county have found a bill of indictment. Eight witnesses have been examined on the part of the prosecution. They were put upon the stand for the purpose of telling the jury how the homicide was committed. Where is young LONG, the person who must know all about the transaction? He knows more about it than any other human being alive except, perhaps, the prisoner. Why is he not here? It may be asked why we don't subpœna him, inasmuch as we know he is in the City, though not in Court. Gentlemen, it is one of the first principles in our profession never to call a hostile witness. Counsel then went into an analysis of the testimony as given by the several witnesses produced by the prosecution, and criticised severely the witness Fitzpatrick, who, he said, was a politician, holding an official position in Washington Market. The contradictions of the witnesses are of so grave a nature that it is really impossible to reconcile them. And yet, gentlemen, you wish to know how it occurred: the community wishes to know; the community have a right to know. Not one of the witnesses has testified that the prisoner took deliberate aim at the heart or the liver of the deceased. In order to test his anatomical knowledge counsel had asked the witness on cross-examination where, in what part of the body, the heart and liver are located, and the witness pointed to the lower part of his abdomen and said, "Here are the heart and the liver." Counsel said he would show by witnesses for the defence that just before he fired at LONG he was struck by a stone or brickbat on the upper part of his spine. Violence was used not only toward the prisoner, but to other officers before the fatal shots were fired. The defence, counsel said, stood upon the ground of justifiable homicide, and upon that ground alone. By a recent act of the Legislature, a person charged with crime, from the highest to the lowest, may go upon the stand and testify in his own behalf. One lawmaking power should now go just one step further, and authorize a wife to testify in behalf of a husband and a husband for a wife, and thus enable a jury to obtain all the light which it is possible to throw upon any transaction in which a misdemeanor or felony are alleged to have been committed. Between 10 and 11 o'clock on the night of July 3 the prisoner heard the screams of a woman in West-street, near Carlisle. He went to her, found her prostrate, and surrounded by a gang of boys and young men, among whom was young LONG, a youth of between 18 and 19 years of age. West-street, at that time of night, was nearly deserted, but around the prostrate form of the woman those vile youths were gathered, for what purpose it is not necessary to say. That their motives were not pure, was quite evident to the officer who is here charged with homicide. He saw young LONG strike the woman, and thereupon took him into custody. We shall show you that while the prisoner had the youngster, taking him to the Station-house, old Mr. LONG, the deceased, came up, and with his left hand seized him by his cravat and gravat, and his right hand hold of his coat collar, and demanded that the young man should be released. Now, LONG the elder had no right to make this demand. The deceased was a very powerful man; all the witnesses concur in saying that. The officer was peacefully and quietly performing his duty when he was assaulted. It was in one of the worst districts of the City. Three offences were committed that night, so far as this policeman was concerned. First, there was the assault upon the woman; second, the rescuing of his prisoner; and, third, the violent and unstinted assault that was made upon him and his brother officers by that lawless gang of the First Ward. If the prosecution had rested upon the testimony of Jackman alone, it would have stood better before the jury than it does now, with BUGENT and all the other witnesses. The uniformly quiet and peaceable character of the prisoner was another element upon which the defence relied.

Herman Smith was the first witness called for the defence by Mr. A. J. Vanderpoel: I reside at No. 119 Greenwich-street, corner of Carlisle; I keep a retail grocery store there; on the night in question I was standing before my door; a little boy came running up Greenwich-street; looked down to the corner of Rector-street, and saw a great crowd of people; heard many loud voices; saw an officer coming out of this crowd having in his custody a young man; he was coming along on the west side of Greenwich-street; when the policeman was near my door, I heard some stones from the direction of Rector-street; the stones flew between me and the policeman; Carlisle is a narrow street, about thirty feet wide; up to that time I had seen only one policeman; the crowd was fifty or sixty feet below at that time; soon after another policeman came up and rapped opposite my door; he gave three raps; after that I heard two shots fired; the noise of people's voices was continued all the time; the stones that were thrown were as large as my fist, I should think; there were at least one hundred persons in the crowd, as near as I can judge.

Cross-examined by the District-Attorney—The officer and the boy were alone, though there were some persons following at a distance; the crowd went up to the front of No. 118 Greenwich-street; the man whom I saw coming up the street was leading a little girl; can't say how long this was after the policeman came along with the young man; when the officer rapped in front of my door I should think there were at least a hundred persons up in front of No. 118; the stones were thrown immediately after the officer went along with the boy, and before the other officer rapped; the stones seemed to come from the south side of Greenwich-street; may have been two or three minutes after I stepped into the store before I heard the first shot fired; I merely stood on the door-sill; I did not go into the store; the whole thing did not probably occupy more than five or six minutes.

John Vaughn, sworn and examined by Mr. Vanderpoel for the defence—testified: I live at No. 116 Greenwich-street; keep a clothing-house there; it is the third door north of Carlisle-street; heard an officer rap there, and a crowd gathered around; heard two shots fired; about a minute elapsed between the first and second shots; I saw one policeman when I went out; there were about one hundred people there when I went out after the second shot was fired; the greatest crowd was opposite No. 120 Greenwich-street, which was next door to my place; there is a street lamp almost opposite No. 116 Greenwich-street; I heard a great amount of shouting, but I could not distinguish anything that was said.

Cross-examined—The first thing that attracted my attention was a rap upon the sidewalk; two or three minutes after I heard the officer's rap I heard the pistol shot; that was a very hot night; many people were sitting out on the stoops and there was considerable firing of crackers, it being the evening before the Fourth of July; the crowd which I saw consisted of men, women and children.

John Lawrence—I play a hand organ on the street and reside in Philadelphia; I have been here about six weeks, and during that time I have stopped at the Caledonia Hotel in West-street; on the night of July 3, my attention was attracted by an officer having in charge a young man in West-street; I heard a young girl say her brother was getting killed; a great crowd began to gather and some of them were throwing bricks or stones; saw one brick strike a policeman in the back of the neck; a large stout man came up to the policeman at the time of the affray; what he had arrested his son for; the officer said "None of your business, you will find out at Station-house;" the strong man then said "This is my business; soon after I heard a pistol shot; there were at least one hundred persons in the crowd at that time; they were men, women and children; I heard a policeman say the crowd moved quite slowly, so much as I, although a cripple, was able to keep with it; there was a vast amount of vulgar and profane language used by numerous persons in the crowd.

On cross-examination this witness said he could not tell positively what time in the evening the affray occurred; there was a large crowd around the policeman at the time the large man took hold of him; the policeman's coat sleeve was torn; I would not think it was more than a minute between the first and second shots; I did not see the man fall down after the shots were fired; there was a second policeman there when the shots were fired; just before the first shot was fired, the second policeman was three or four feet away from the first policeman; I did not see any third policeman; there were two policemen there when the man put his hand on the shoulder of one of them; the crowd rushed up as soon as the coat was torn, and I could not see what took place after that.

At the conclusion of the testimony of this witness, Mr. R. D. HOLMES, one of the counsel for the prisoner, said there was some difference of opinion between himself and his associates as to the order in which the testimony should be introduced. He, for himself, was in favor of introducing it in its chronological order.

Mr. C. S. SPRENGER, another of the counsel for Mr. CAMPBELL, expressed himself entirely satisfied with the admirable way in which Mr. A. J. VANDERPOEL, who had taken the evidence under his control, was managing that part of the case. He hoped Mr. VANDERPOEL would be allowed to continue the examination of witnesses as he had begun.

Judge CARDOZO suggested that although it lacked half an hour of the time for adjournment, the business of the trial might be facilitated by adjourning then, and thus give counsel an opportunity to consult together as to the order in which the further testimony should be introduced.

Mr. SPRENGER was anxious to get through with the trial as soon as possible with due regard to the magnitude of the case. Some of his family were very ill, and it was of the utmost importance to him personally that the trial proceed with all convenient speed.

Judge CARDOZO reminded counsel that his suggestion was made for their convenience, and not against their wishes. He was willing to proceed, assured the counsel for the people were willing to proceed. District-Attorney GARVIN manifested his readiness to continue, but, after some further unimportant discussion, the Court adjourned until this morning. Before adjourning Judge CARDOZO said he must caution the jury, as he had previously done, about listening to any conversation on the subject of this trial, and if any person or persons approached them in regard to it, it was their duty to report the fact to the Court, with the name or names of the person or persons so offending.

A CASE FOR THE COURTS.

A Woman Said to be of Sound Mind Imprisoned in the Bloomingdale Insane Asylum.

One of those cases of alleged oppression which arise from time to time in the proceedings of the Courts, and around which more or less mystery always clusters, has just been brought to light in the Court of Common Pleas of this City. Yesterday Mr. JOHN D. TOWNSEND appeared as counsel before Judge BRADY, and filed a petition on behalf of Mrs. ABIJAH W. COLVILL, an old lady of 75 years, who claims to be imprisoned in the Bloomingdale Asylum on a false certificate of insanity. The petition sets forth some of the facts as set forth in the petition and otherwise developed in connection with the application for a writ of habeas corpus. About four weeks ago the officer of the Independent received a letter from the Asylum, signed "Mrs. COLVILL," calling attention of her imprisonment, and asking him to call on Mr. TOWNSEND and induce him to look after her case. Subsequently Mr. TOWNSEND received two or three letters from Mrs. COLVILL, all of which, as the petition states, indicated her to be a person of perfect mind and memory, which latter fact was still more fully confirmed by a subsequent personal interview at the Asylum.

For a few years past the old lady has been living alone in Hoboken, N. J., being supported by means furnished by her son, Mr. JOHN COLVILL, a merchant of this City, though she has not seen him for about twenty-eight years. About four or ten months ago Mrs. COLVILL was taken sick at the house where she resided, and, being entirely alone the lady from whom she rented endeavored to find out from her the names of her friends or relations. She declined to give their names, and appeared to entertain fears on the subject. The lady learned the name of Mrs. COLVILL's agent, a Mr. FLEMMING, of New-York, her landlady sent for him. He soon after called, bringing with him Miss AGNES COLVILL, of Newburg, a daughter of Mrs. COLVILL, who remained with her until she became insane, and was supported by her. The lady of the house that after the arrival of the daughter, she and her family found great difficulty in obtaining access to the old lady.

When Miss AGNES COLVILL had been there about a week, during which time a colored woman had been hired to take charge of the old lady, a carriage was brought from New-York and the old lady removed, much against her will, accompanied by Mr. FLEMMING and her daughter ALICE. Parties who have visited the house of Mrs. COLVILL, in Hoboken, have found, on inquiry, that the neighbors considered her a quiet, inoffensive woman, and were surprised to learn that she had been immured in a lunatic asylum. From statements made on the application for the writ, it would appear that application for a certificate of insanity was made to one of the doctor who attended Mrs. COLVILL in her illness, but he refused. Dr. JULIAN, now residing in Hoboken, was one of the signers of the certificate on which she was committed, and Dr. BENEDEK, whose present residence is unknown, the other. Dr. JULIAN, on being questioned on the subject, stated that he had collected the whole of the matter; and a similar request for information to Justice WHITE, who signed the commitment, brought from him a statement that he had acted chiefly on the strength of Dr. JULIAN's representations, he having no acquaintance with the lady himself. He stated that the law of the law of New-Jersey required the signatures of two Magistrates to such a commitment, but nevertheless, such asylum has a right to regulate the matter for itself. It was stated that a gentleman connected with the Independent had taken a deep interest in the case from motives of charity, and that no effort would be spared to solve the mystery which now surrounds the case. Judge BRADY allowed the writ, directed to D. TILDEN BROWN, physician in charge of the Asylum, returnable on the 4th of August next.

Additional Transfers of Policemen.

The Board of Police Commissioners held another meeting yesterday, and having made a large number of transfers of patrolmen from and to the different precincts, also ordered the following transfers, all to take effect on the 1st of August:

Sergeant John Fitzgerald, Twentieth to Thirtieth Precinct.

Sergeant Wm. Lowden, Thirtieth to Twenty-second Precinct.

Sergeant Myer Allen, Twenty-ninth Precinct to Second Precinct.

Sergeant John H. Polley, Twenty-second Precinct to Twentieth Precinct.

Sergeant Cassalear, Fifteen Precinct to Forty-fourth Precinct.

Patrolman Joshua Hodgson, from the Third District Court to Twenty-third Precinct.

Patrolman Marcus Hurlbert, from Twenty-first Precinct to Third District Court.

Patrolman J. A. Fleming, from Fourth District Court to Twelfth Precinct.

A Sharp Operation in Stocks—Forgery of Railroad Shares.

Some weeks ago a young man giving his name as GEORGE A. ABBOTT purchased at the office of HEATH & CO., brokers, at No. 12 Broadway, two certificates of 100 shares each ($100 per share) of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, for the sum of $22,800. Yesterday ABBOTT called again at the office of HEATH & CO., and presenting what purported to be the 1500 shares which he had purchased on short a time previously, asked that they be at once disposed of, and the proceeds converted into United States Five-twenty coupon bonds. ABBOTT was so anxious to have the shares sold at once that one of the gentlemen of the firm became suspicious of the affair, and on making an examination of the shares, found them to be cleverly executed forgeries. It was subsequently ascertained that the genuine certificates had been presented at the office of the Rock Island, Chicago and Pacific Railroad Company in this City, redeemed and canceled. When ABBOTT made his appearance he was given in custody of Officer DOYLE, and on being arraigned before Alderman O'BRIEN, was committed for trial in default of $5,000 bail.

A. T. Stewart's Retail Store.

Mr. A. T. STEWART has purchased the two lots and buildings adjoining his retail store, corner of Broadway and Tenth-street, one of which was formerly occupied by GOUPIL, and intends building thereon an extension to his present magnificent establishment. When this improvement is completed Mr. STEWART's store will occupy the entire block, and will be the largest establishment of the kind in the country. The extension work is to be begun forthwith.

The Fenian Fund Again.

Yesterday, before Judge MCGUIRE, in the Superior Court, Special Term, two motions were made by Mr. JAMES HERNANDEZ, counsel for Mr. BARR, the receiver. One motion was for an order to make the receiver a party defendant in the action, and directing that he be served with notice of usance in all proceedings in the case. There being no opposition to this motion on the part of Mr. BURKSER or Mr. O'MAHONY, the order was entered accordingly.

The motion to punish Mr. LUCKE for contempt for paying a portion of the funds into the Supreme Court while a stay of proceedings was pending, was opposed by Mr. MCFARLAND, who had affidavits disclaiming any intention on the part of Mr. LUCKE to knowingly or willfully disobey the order of the Court. He, Mr. MCFARLAND, was prepared to show that the money was paid over the day, and for some days prior, it was supposed, was by proper authority. Some steps have been made to obtain the money back, and he was in hopes that, as no intention to violate the order was shown, the Court would not punish Mr. LUCKE. Mr. BARR, who was present in Court representing the bondholders, expressed his desire to cooperate in having the entire funds placed in the hands of Mr. BARR, deeming that thereby the interests of those he represents will be best protected.

The Farmers' Club.

The session of the Club yesterday was rather thinly attended, probably on account of the busy season of the year and the hot weather.

making the sell, the defendant has not betrayed it, but has proceeded in an entirely different one; and if it is to claim for the article produced, the construction applicable to the patent claim claims alone of it. That whether Horsford was the first person who used as a substitute for yeast a powder containing phosphate acid as its active agent, and whether he is entitled to a patent for applying phosphoric acid to combination with an alkaline carbonate to the raising of dough, and whether his third and fourth claims are for processes which will prize when a suit is brought for the infringement of the third and fourth claims, but are not presented in this case.

Bill dismissed with costs.

For plaintiff, W. Whiting and C. W. Seward; for defendant, R. W. Broughton and C. M. Keller.

PATENT FOR CORSET SPRINGS.

Francis L. Sarner, Administrator, &c. vs Pentecost Stevens.—This was a motion for an injunction founded on a patent for a corset spring.

PLAINTIFF'S CASE.—While it was admitted that the corset spring made and sold by the defendant infringed the first claim of the plaintiff's patent, yet in view of the French patent to Lemoyne, granted in 1865, I do not think the question as to the novelty of said first claim is so free from doubt as to warrant the granting of a provisional injunction. The case must go to final hearing.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—JULY 27.

Before Judge Brady.

THE SOUTH PACIFIC RAILROAD INJUNCTION.

James B. Hodgskins et al. vs. The South Pacific Railroad Company et al.—The original injunction issued in this case has been modified according to the following order made by Judge BRADY:

"The injunction either granted herein on the 23d day of July instant, is hereby modified so far as to permit Clark, Dodge & Co. to purchase, sell and deal in the bonds of the South Pacific Railroad Company which had been already issued and delivered, and in the hands of the parties thereto, prior to the date of said order, and also to permit said firm to sell and negotiate bonds of said Company, which are in fact held and owned by said firm or its associate firms, and which were issued under said order, which should be filed with the clerk of the South Pacific Railroad Company."

Judge BRADY, in granting the foregoing order, delivered the following OPINION.—In this case, I did not intend by the injunction, to prohibit the defendants, Clark, Dodge & Co., from selling any of the bonds mentioned, which they, or either of them owned individually and personal, without countenance in reference to the injunction originally granted herein, or from dealing in any of the bonds which are dealt on the market, and the subject and general barter. The defendants in this action, as originally brought, having been restrained, it was proper that all persons acting for them directly or indirectly should obey an proper application be also restrained. What cannot be done directly cannot be done indirectly. If the defendants, Clark, Dodge & Co., should sell any bonds issued to the plaintiff, or granted in lieu of, or within the exception already expected, they would be amenable to punishment for contempt as if the modification asked had not been made. The injunction will for these reasons be modified to the extent shown by the order herewith filed.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

Before Judge Kelly.

Forty-three cases appeared on the calendar yesterday morning.

PICKPOCKET ON A HORSE CAR.

William Warner, a well-dressed young man, had the misfortune of being caught with his hand in the pocket of a passenger on a Fourth-avenue street car, which resulted in his arrest. Officer Irwin saw him in the act and caught hold of his coat, which, meanwhile, had slipped off and then ran away. He subsequently was properly identified by the "high-flying" gentleman, and the Court sent him for three months to the Penitentiary.

RAISE OF A COUNTER CHECK.

In the case of Andrew McMahan vs. Nathan Schumacher for keeping a disorderly house, it appeared that the complaint was first made against Mr. White, whose name was scratched off two days afterward and Schumacher's substituted. The defendant, Chas. S. Spencer, Esq., argued that the complaint as it then stood against Schumacher, had not been renewed by before Judge Dowling, and that consequently it was not before the Court. This was the report of the Clerk of the Bombs Police Court. Judge Kelly decided a new complaint must be made against Schumacher and discharged him.

ROUTING WITH SOUR.

Eighty cents worth of iron bolts cost Jacob Epstel $5. He had to pay them from the shop of D. J. Rice without mentioning the fact to him or his clerk during their value. The Court fixed the price of them, considering the circumstances under which they were bought, at the above figure.

CANTON CRAPE SHAWL.

Wm. H. Sharrott was brought up to account for a certain shawl found in his possession. Peter E. Smith claimed it as the property of his wife, who lost it about two years ago. The shawl was produced and in Court, and testimony offered to prove identicality with the one stolen. Witnesses were called up on both sides, and several shawls were described. The question of identification was a difficult one, and perplexed the Court, which put the article in Court. Both parties claimed that they had a crape shawl, and that this particular one was theirs. The Court, however, stopped the case by attaching the shawl to the complaint, and directing the shawl to be sent back to the Police Magistrate for disposition. Complainant and defendant both seemed bound to have it, and left the Court-room together, thinking that each should get the advantage of the other.

POLICE COURTS.

The Bombs—O'Brien, Alderman.

STEALING OSTRICH FEATHERS.

John Roberts and James Morgan were arrested by Detective Woodridge, of the Sixth Precinct, and brought before the acting Magistrate on suspicion of having stolen six boxes of ostrich feathers, valued at $800, for the possession of which they could not satisfactorily account. The accused were remanded for examination.

FELONIOUS ASSAULTS.

On Monday evening two brothers, named Henry C. and Samuel K. Glover, called on Michael Quigley, of No. 9 State-street, for the purpose of borrowing a gun. While there a quarrel took place, during which the Glovers left, followed by Quigley, who overtook them with the gun, and caused serious injuries. The Glovers were committed for trial.

Yesterday afternoon, Marks Joseph and Jacob Libberberg were in the house of the latter, when they quarreled, and during the melée Jacob stabbed Joseph in the breast with a pair of shears, inflicting a severe wound. Libberberg was arrested and committed to the Tombs, to await the result of the wound.

TUESDAY, July 27—P. M.

The combination on the street to advance the sales of Gold to 140 ⅌ cent., or as near that point as the surroundings of the market would allow, broke down to-day from 137½ ⅌ cent. to 136½ ⅌ cent., as they advanced yesterday from 136½ to 137½ ⅌ cent. We have believed the basis of this contemplated rise wholly erroneous in theory and of doubtful practicability, without entertaining the slightest feeling as to whether it should momentarily succeed or not. In these views we have differed with several of our contemporaries, some of whom this Afternoon concede that the advance in Gold yesterday and this morning is not supported by the actual selling rate of Exchange, or by the course of business with London and Frankfort in United States 5-20s. That some of the buyers of Gold may also have been the buyers of 5-20s, as other parties undoubtedly have been, and continue to be, is not improbable, but the transaction of the latter to Europe, in such large sums as our neighbors confess to, is certainly inconsistent with anything like a formidable export demand for Gold. But independent of these considerations, the party engaged in forcing the premium or price of Gold from 135 to 140 ⅌ cent. have probably become satisfied, or if they have not, there is abundant good reason why they should be, that the Secretary of the Treasury may soon avail of the higher price to turn part of his heavy Gold surplus now in the ownership of the Government (reported as high as seventy millions of dollars) into United States 5-20s, to eminent advantage, additional to his present rate of weekly purchases out of his existing Currency balances. His disposition on this subject would reasonably be very different as between Gold plenty at 135 and Gold made scarce, whether by speculation or by an unusual export demand, at 137½ to 140 ⅌ cent.

Our contemporary of the Buffalo Express pays us the undeserved compliment of naming the TIMES as the organ in New-York Railway affairs, of Mr. VANDERBILT. We have not been ambitious of playing such a part, even if Mr. VANDERBILT were so far wanting in practical good sense (which we have never heard him accused of) as to need an organ. But while we say this, we are very far from agreeing with our Buffalo friend that because the New-York Roads, known as the Vanderbilt lines, have largely advanced under his management, Mr. VANDERBILT himself is necessarily a monopolist. He has in no wise diminished competition between New-York and the Great West, or between New-York and Buffalo. His live competitors, like Mr. THOMPSON, of the Pennsylvania Railway, and Mr. GARRETT, of the Baltimore and Ohio, are as active and untiring as he is for the Western trade, and the acrobatic Erie Ring as desperate and unskillful—and, if report she true, infinitely more profuse in free passes and reckless in cheap freights—as when Central was selling at 110 and Hudson at 90 ⅌ cent.

Without knowing much about Mr. VANDERBILT or his personal affairs, we should say that the only possible sense in which he could be charged with monopoly is, that he has persistently, and so he could command the Money, largely bought up his own Stocks, Central, Hudson and Harlem, without soliciting third parties to take any part of them off his hands at the most tempting profits. It might even be charged upon him, and no doubt with the same truth, that he has at all times been reluctant to advise his nearest friends to buy these Stocks, on temporary speculation, considering all claim upon his courtesy at an end in the expression of his candid opinion of what he would make them all worth, as productive properties, if his life were spared a few years, and of what they are intrinsically worth in any event under honest management.

The sales of Gold have ranged through the day 137½@137¼@137¼@136⅞@136¾@137¼@137 ⅌ cent. The Export by the Hamburg steamer amounted to $210,000. The Customs paid into the Treasury Office $424,000; the Gold Interest paid out $217,000. The Currency balance in the Treasury Office changed but slightly. The general balance this afternoon, (Gold and Notes,) $94,226,126. To-morrow, at noon, the Assistant Treasurer, under the order of the Secretary, will purchase $2,000,000 United States 5-20s. The rates of Exchange, 60 days, on London, to-day, were 109¾@110¼ ⅌ cent., the market fairly supplied, and Short Sight Bills relatively cheaper.

The Stock Exchange has been active and prices firm for the Public Funds of the United States of all descriptions, and the market evidently feels not only the pending purchases of $4,000,000 on Wednesday and Thursday for the Sinking Fund, but an increasing demand for transmission abroad. The 5-20s of 1862 sold up to 122¼, and the 1867s to 121¼ ⅌ cent. The Southern State Bonds were 2 ⅌ cent. lower for new North Carolinas and dull, and ¼@¾ ⅌ cent. lower on new Tennessees. There is not much doing in the Miscellaneous Shares; the quiet in Pacific Mail is particularly remarked upon.

There was a fair amount of business in the Railway market, though the chief activity, as well as the only important fluctuations, is confined to the New-York Vanderbilt Roads; Central was done as high as 117¾, and as low as 116¾ ⅌ cent.; Harlem at 103½ and at 171 ⅌ cent.; Hudson, 125@125¼ ⅌ cent. Reading made a further advance of one ⅌ cent. after the Board. In the Long Room and on the sidewalk in front of the Exchange the following quotations were made at 5:30 P. M., as compared with Monday night. Reading sold as high as 100⅞, and Ohio and Mississippi advanced to 33¼ ⅌ cent.:

The Evening Post has the following of a fraud attempted on the Brokers to-day. From what we hear of the appearance of the false Certificates of Stock, we should say that the Brokers cannot be too careful in executing orders to buy or sell for parties not well known to them:

"Suspicion has recently been aroused by the appearance of forged Certificates of Stock of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. The spurious certificates are said to bear a close resemblance to the genuine issue. The fraud was discovered and his examination is, we understand, now progressing at the Tombs. Upon inquiry at the office of the Company we were unable to ascertain any particulars, owing to the absence of the President, who was attending the examination. The extent of the forgeries is unknown, but, it is believed, is not large."

Sealed proposals to be left with the Mercantile National Bank, to and including the 5th August prox., are invited by the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad Company, for the sale of any part of $120,000,000 of the Bonds of the Company to the Finance Committee. See Advertisement.

Mr. R. C. DANIEL, of Messrs. LEWIS, DANIEL & Co., has been admitted to membership in the Gold-room.

The week's exports of Domestic Produce had been to the currency value of $4,544,557.

The movements in Wheat in Milwaukee week ending with July 24, Messrs. GEORGE I. JONES & Co. notice thus:

"Our Wheat market during the past week has fluctuated considerably, and toward the close has shown some of the usual last part of July features—reduced receipts and increased demand. On Monday morning the opening prices were $1 83½ for No. 1 and $1 25 for No. 2, but there was a speedy decline to $1 80 for No. 1, and $1 24 for No. 2, quickly followed by a fall to $1 78 for No. 1 and $1 23 for No. 2. On Tuesday morning, with heavy rains, the market opened at $1 79 for No. 1, and $1 19 for No. 2, but with unfavorable Liverpool reports (2c. 11d.) prices fell back to $1 77 for No. 1, and $1 17 for No. 2. During Wednesday further receded to $1 75 for No. 1, and $1 23 for No. 2, rallying, however, in the afternoon to $1 82½@$1 83½. Thursday, with private cable advices of an advance in Liverpool, and increased bid weather in Ireland, prices further advanced, for yesterday 27th, more, and this morning to, further, sales being made at $1 89 for No. 1, and $1 43½ for No. 2, but at the close there were bids for No. 1 at $1 87, and for No. 2 at $1 40. NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The English Parliament will be prorogued on the 10th of August.

The rebellious Carlists in Spain have met with another defeat. At Tarascon a party fought with the volunteers and were whipped. The rebellion seems to be quite unpopular with the people.

GENERAL.

All Spaniards between the ages of fifteen and sixty in the jurisdiction of Trinidad, Cuba, have been ordered to duty by the Governor. These 3i for active service are to be sent to the field or placed in the reserve corps, and those unfit are to garrison the towns.

A negro riot, that at one moment threatened to assume serious proportions, occurred Sunday night in Charleston. A brass band, composed of colored men, who were said to be Democrats, was accompanying a visiting baseball club to the Savannah boat, when they were attacked by a mob of several hundred men. Sticks and stones were used, and several shots were fired, and several persons were wounded. The interference of the military finally restored comparative order.

The petty war between the two factions into which a number of the Sicilians in New-Orleans are divided, the Palermo and Messina parties, has broken out anew. A few days ago, several members of the two parties meeting, shots were freely exchanged, and two men were killed—JOSEPH BAMANO and PIETRO ALLUCIO.

The farms along the entire breadth of the valleys of the Colorado, Brazos and Guadaloupe Rivers, in Texas, have been entirely swept away by the recent floods. The estimated damage on the Colorado alone is $3,000,000.

Burglars entered the residence of Mr. RICHARD BRADLEY, in Savannah, early on Saturday morning, and after stupefying Mr. JOHN H. BRADLEY, the only person in the house, by placing a sponge saturated with chloroform on his pillow as he lay asleep, leisurely ransacked the house and took off all the valuables that they could easily carry. Daring burglaries have been quite frequent of late in Savannah.

The weavers employed in the cotton mills in the old district of Kensington, Penn., are now on a strike for higher wages; and, in consequence, nearly a thousand persons are out of work; 1,200 or 1,700 looms are idle, and all the principal mills are closed. They demand an increase of fifteen cents a cut, and the proprietors stubbornly refuse to pay the advance.

It is surmised that the Military Commission who tried YERGER, in Jackson, Miss., for the murder of Colonel CRAWE, have found the prisoner guilty of murder and sentenced him to death, as the sentence in any case short of capital punishment would have needed only the approval of the Commanding General of the district, and this has been forwarded to Washington for approval.

Charges of extensive larcenies have been made, in Syracuse, against JOHN H. SIMS and others. It is alleged that while SIMS was a convict in the Auburn State Prison, packing goods for HOWLAND & Co., the tool-making contractors, he, with the aid of other convicts, and a clerk, named TERRYCK, sent out valuable goods to accomplices in various localities. The value of the articles thus stolen is stated at $20,000.

In the case of LEONARD CROATE, the alleged Newburyport, Mass., "Fire-bug," who applied for a writ of habeas corpus a few days since, for the purpose of procuring a reduction of bail, a decision has been given. The bail upon all the indictments found by the Grand Jury against the defendant reaches the sum of $40,000, being from $2,000 to $5,000 upon each indictment, and the petitioner sought to procure a reduction of bail by having it fixed at a gross sum upon all the indictments. The Judge holding that he had no authority so to fix the bail in a gross sum, and that the bail when considered as relating to each indictment was not excessive, the writ is denied.

The Tennessee Contest—Mr. Boutwell's Letter.

The wisdom of the course pursued by Secretary BOUTWELL, in identifying himself with STOKES in the Tennessee contest, is more than doubtful. "Greatly interested", in the contest he may naturally be; and right he certainly is in "believing that the future political character and general prosperity of the State depend largely upon the continuance of the Republican Party in power." But we are unable to appreciate the expediency or justice of interference in behalf of one section of the Republican Party and against another section; the section assailed by Mr. BOUTWELL being moreover, that which is most in harmony with the general policy of the President and with the desires and purposes of the party everywhere.

It cannot be on the ground of political antecedents and consistency that the Secretary declares himself in favor of STOKES. As between STOKES and SENTER there is in this respect nothing to choose. Both were hostile to the authority of the Union at the outbreak of the war. Neither became loyal under circumstances which entitle him to any special credit. Ex-Governor BROWNLOW, who can be no more suspected of sympathy with rebels than Mr. BOUTWELL, declares that, with twenty-five years' knowledge of both candidates, his preference is for SENTER. "I have closely watched their political course," says the old man, "and I give it as my candid opinion that Governor SENTER's personal character is the better of the two; that his political record is more consistent; and that, in point of ability and statesmanship, he is far superior." We do not accept this testimony as conclusive. But it forms a tolerably good set-off to the Secretary's partiality for STOKES.

If a superior, personal or political record cannot be claimed for STOKES, is he entitled to consideration because of greater regularity in his nomination? Is he the regular Republican candidate, and SENTER the bolter? Certainly not. The Convention called to nominate a candidate did not outlive the preliminaries; a row arose about the chairmanship, and the proceedings went no farther. And inasmuch as no nomination was made, neither STOKES nor SENTER can pretend to be the regular candidate. Both are self-nominated. This fact, however, seems unquestionable; of the delegates to the Convention, a majority were friends of SENTER; the disturbance which terminated the Convention having been gotten up by supporters of STOKES and in his interest.

The consistency of the two candidates being equal, judging of them in relation to the Union in the early stages of the war, and the irregularity of their candidacy being the same, in what direction shall we look for the justification of Mr. BOUTWELL's interference? The proper test, next to the regularity of a party nomination, is the platform on which the contest is conducted. Tried by this standard, we have no hesitation in saying that the platform occupied by SENTER is more in accord with that of the Administration and of the Republican Party than that of his opponent. The canvass, so far, has been marked more by an interchange of offensive personalities than the discussion of principles. But an important principle, nevertheless, separates the candidates. SENTER and his friends—BROWNLOW included—favor the earliest possible enfranchisement of those on whom the local law has heaped disabilities. They proclaim that proscription was a necessity of the times, which it was resorted to, but that the necessity for it has passed, and that its continuance serves only to keep alive angry feeling and foster difficulties in the State. The STOKES Party, on the other hand, under the plea of preserving partisan ascendency, would prolong disfranchisement, with all its irritation and injustice.

On the leading issue of the canvass, then, SENTER is, and STOKES is not, in harmony with the present policy of the Republican Party. That policy in regard to proscription is happily unmistakable. The Chicago Convention which nominated GRANT placed him on a platform of which the removal of disabilities was a conspicuous feature; and successive State Conventions have reaffirmed the same purpose. The latest instance is that of the California Republicans, who resolved "That the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment should be followed by an act of universal amnesty and the enfranchisement of the Southern people." The Republicans of Mississippi, "Radical" and "Conservative," are agreed upon this point, which commands the almost undivided approval of the Republican Press throughout the country. By identifying himself with proscription, STOKES runs counter to Republican feeling in other States, and so concedes to SENTER the vantage ground.

With regard to the Fifteenth Amendment, there is no difference between the candidates. SENTER has avowed himself its advocate in decided terms, asserting that its adoption by the Tennessee Legislature is "dictated by justice, sound policy and wise statesmanship." In this respect, therefore, he is unobjectionable.

Mr. BOUTWELL's letter, then, seems to us a mistake—a mistake that is all the more serious because involving reflections upon the patriotism of the Republican supporters of SENTER, the leaders of whom have built up the Republican Party in Tennessee, and stood by it when STOKES was selfishly calculating the chances. It is not prudent or just for the Secretary of the Treasury to interfere between Republicans, and least of all to accompany interference with imputations upon those of them who have espoused the cause of SENTER. There is no valid reason for identifying the Administration with the triumph of one candidate or the other. Both being Republicans, with a large Republican following, the interest of the Administration and of the party will be best promoted by the maintenance of a neutral attitude at Washington. There may be little apparent impropriety in an expression of preference for STOKES; but it is desirable to make enemies of the Senter Republicans, who will in all probability carry the State?

The Oxford-Harvard Race.

Since the Harvard four have arrived in England, and taken up their quarters in the little cottage on the Thames, the interest in the coming contest has so increased that already, according to the London telegram, "it exceeds that of the annual University contest" between Oxford and Cambridge. This news adds that "the betting is in favor of Oxford," and very naturally, too; but our impression is that those people who took the original odds of 100 to 10 on Oxford are just now quite satisfied with their prospects; 100 to 10 is long odds to offer on any match between two crews, both claiming to be good—it is hardly enough even to cover the chance of accidents, let alone the other chances. More especially is this true when one of the boats is an utterly unknown quantity in the problem. That Oxford will continue to be the favorite in the betting up to the race, merely on the doctrine of chances, without any question of sympathy or national pride, we may safely assume; but we may also venture to predict that there will be no more such long odds offered on the dark blue. And, as we have said, should the odds fall, as they probably will, to ten to two, ten to three or ten to four, the takers of the original wagers will find themselves in a position to sell out at a handsome margin of profit.

For, it must be remembered, that time constantly increases the chances of Harvard by striking out one or another of the disadvantages, and removing one more of those risks which the American crew so gallantly took. To begin with, there was the risk of the sea voyage, now happily over. There was the same risk for the spare men or substitutes, which will soon be over. There is the risk of the boat, which is said to have turned out to be thoroughly satisfactory, so giving a moral advantage to the spirits of the crew hardly less than its intrinsic advantage of lightness and buoyancy. And so, in a word, as time elapses, the original inequalities of condition between the two crews,—as distinguished from their differences in rowing skill,—are gradually reduced. While the safe elimination of these risks should not lessen our praise for the high spirit which assumed them, yet, on the other hand, we shall be disappointed if this fact does not cause the lofty tone of patronage which papers like the Pall Mall Gazette have assumed, to change to something better justified by the facts in the case.

Whatever the issue, this is to be no "distancing" affair. The Oxford crew have no boys' play before them; and although the paper just quoted thinks the Harvard four probably "about equal to an English junior or 'torpid' crew," we know too well the splendid character of Harvard pulling in general to doubt that it will vindicate itself when represented by so superb a four. Granting that in physical strength and condition the two crews will be equal, or, as is more probable, that Oxford will have a slight advantage, it is now asserted by some professional oarsmen in this country, to whom the "Harvard style," now thoroughly known, was like a revelation, that the latter will vindicate its superiority even over the hitherto matchless "Oxford stroke" at the race. Since the affair at Worcester, in which skill achieved as signal a victory over greater strength, this feeling has grown stronger. With the American device of rowing without a coxswain to aid it, it is believed that this Harvard stroke would assuredly win; and, even without the former, it is believed that, as practiced by the best amateur four that ever pulled together in the country, it gives a good chance of success. Should it achieve the victory it so well deserves, the Harvard style of oarmanship would probably be practiced everywhere, and so mark one more epoch in the history of the art of rowing.

We very gladly take this more hopeful view of the chances of our champions, particularly because none of the drawbacks which had been anticipated have thus far been met. And it should be added that the Oxonians express their ability to so control the policing of the Thames as to insure a perfectly fair contest. Their willingness and great eagerness to do this have always been known; it has only been feared hitherto that the difficulties of the task might be too great, and that the scenes of some University races might be repeated.

England and China—The Fruits of Mr. Burlingame's Mission.

The British Government — speaking through Mr. OTWAY, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs—has again announced its intention of dealing for the future with the Central Government of China alone for redress in case of outrages on British subjects, and of "abstaining from any acts which would remove the responsibility from them to the local authorities." Once more England has pledged herself formally to abide by the main principles advocated by Mr. BURLINGAME, and the policy, as well as the justice of so doing, was well supported by Mr. OTWAY. Colonel SYKES, who brought the subject before the House, talked in the old strain about the weakness of the Central Government, the impossibility of its controlling the local authorities, or in any way restraining popular animosity against foreigners, and the necessity for England to maintain her old policy—that of treating the Chinese as a set of savages, with whom trade was profitable, but who had no national rights that need be respected. According to his view, in fact, it is difficult to see what rights they have at all, national or individual, except that of being compelled to trade or be converted, just at the option of any Englishman who may choose to take advantage of treaty rights to live in China. At last, however, he was extinguished by the loud cries of "divide," with which any peculiarly obnoxious speaker is always greeted by the House. Mr. LIDDELL, in seconding this motion for inquiry into British relations with China, took different ground, and secured an attentive hearing—declaring that the United States of America were entitled to "admiration and imitation in all their intercourse with China," and that they had "invariably shown a conciliation, a prudence, and a conception of Chinese feelings, which fully entitled them to any authority or influence which they undoubtedly possessed over that nation." Therefore, he argued, it was particularly necessary that England should scrupulously observe international law in all her dealings with China, in order to avoid "awkward" consequences.

It is gratifying to find that the true nature of American policy with regard to China has been so clearly stated in the House of Commons, and still more so that the declarations of Government were in full harmony with Burlingame doctrines, and that Mr. OTWAY, on behalf of Lord CLARENDON, announced the final abandonment of the "gunboat policy." It is true that one of his main arguments was based, not on the abstract justice of the case, but on the probability that in course of time, China would possess gunboats of her own, and would that policy then be successful? But he acknowledged in any case the injustice of any attempt on the part of England to take the law into her own hands, urged the House to consider the natural weakness of the Central Government at the present moment, after passing through three foreign wars within twenty years—mainly brought about by the "gunboat" policy—and reminded his hearers that other nations besides England had treaty rights in China, and that the whole subject could only be dealt with by general, comprehensive and deliberate negotiations with the Central Government. We are glad to see that Mr. BURLINGAME's mission, which at first was greeted with such a storm of obloquy by the English Press, should so soon have resulted in so material a modification of England's policy in her relations with China.

More and Terpsichore.

Jenkins finds all he can do now to chronicle the nightly deeds of the knightly men who now dance and disport at Long Branch. The military men are clearly in favor nowadays at the Court of Beauty, as indeed they deserve to be. What were those lines we used to repeat in younger days, from DRYDEN? "None but the brave, none but the brave, none but the brave deserve the fair." Yet, on the other hand, there have been difficulties for soldiers in society; a man whose life has been passed in camp and garrison, naturally falls short of some of the ever-varying accomplishments of society. He may know all about point-blank and ricochet in gunnery, and yet be ignorant of the relentless laws of croquet; he may be vexed in putting an Irish recruit through his paces, without being able to go through his own in the German. Nevertheless, there is no alternative. Society wants heroes, and wants them to dance; and, seeing that the balls now in vogue are not of the sort the military were used to, (though Augustus, if he is not more careful, may find them just as deadly,) why, of course MAHOMET must go to the mountain—our heroes must lead the quadrille.

This, accordingly is the sort of description we read nowadays:

"On the right flank the interest centred in three stout Tecumseh, gracefully supporting MRS. GRANT, while opposite them stood the Sphinx of the Capital and MRS. BOZIE, the head couples comprising SHERIDAN and MISS SHERMAN, with General COMSTOCK and MRS. COMSTOCK vis-à-vis. In the second set General FOSTER, a very Ajax in the fight, a Sidney in the ballroom, led forth MISS EMILIE GRANT, whose light step and graceful carriage contrasted well with the elegant dignity of MRS BOZIE, the dashing movement of General AMES, and the more sober motions of Captain and MRS. SWEENEY."

This was at Long Branch, the other night; and what we wish to note is the marked improvement which Jenkins now reports in the dancing of such dignitaries as Generals GRANT, SHERMAN and SHERIDAN. Our readers will recall his descriptions of the dancing of the first two of these distinguished men at Annapolis. It was "ludicrous," "pitiable"—SHERMAN walked through the quadrille "as if he were marching to the sea;" GRANT was "utterly helpless," and so on. Now, all this is changed. One reporter devotes himself to the "dashing movements of SHERMAN," another to the "stately step of SHERMAN," and a third vows that General GRANT, though no dancer, is far from being awkward or ungraceful." One authority, referring to the performance of the Lancers, by these distinguished persons, does, indeed, declare:

"General GRANT, under the impression that it was a plain quadrille, became slightly confused, and General SHERMAN also seemed bewildered, but it was fun for little PHIL SHERIDAN, who all through the dance went it with the vim and hurrah of the genuine cavalryman, much to the amusement of the circle who gathered near."

It should be suggested, in justice to all parties, that "the Lancers" do not form now, as they formerly did, a part of the Regular Army organization—though perhaps it might be possible to introduce them in the military establishment "on a peace basis."

However, we note, and we are glad to note, this gradual triumph, if we may take an arrow from Jenkins' metaphorical quiver, of Mars in the domain of Terpsichore. If we must insist on putting our high officers and dignitaries through the dance, it is a pleasure to observe that that bore is probably becoming less disagreeable to them, and that there is a gratifying progress to be acknowledged, in comparing the spectacle of Annapolis with that of West Point, and that of West Point with that of Long Branch.

Music in the Parks.

There is music on the Mall at Central Park every Saturday, and on the Green every Wednesday, and the proprietors of the Mineral Springs are seeking permission to have a band at their place on other days. This is all very well; the more music the better; but why confine the music to Central Park? It seems to us that there are many reasons why it is very desirable that there should be music at least one evening in each week of the warm season in City Hall Park, Union-square, and Washington and Tompkins Parade Grounds. Shopkeepers and dealers generally in these vicinities would find the investment of the small outlay required from each of them for this purpose a very profitable one, by reason of the numbers of visitors that would be drawn to these localities, while, at the same time, they would be doing something toward rendering these sections of the City more attractive than they now are. A good band performing nightly in each of the parks named would be found to be a paying institution. There are any number of good bands in the City who would find profit and make reputations in this way. We have also numbers of excellent musical societies—such as the Arion, the Liederkranz, the Maennerchor—who practice each week in their close and crowded halls. Why cannot some or all of these give us open-air choruses in the down-town parks? The masses of our people have no actual knowledge of the amateur musical talent that this City can produce, because these choral societies never exhibit themselves except occasionally to a select few in their own halls. If the suggestion herein put forth be acted on, there is no reason why New-York should not become as renowned for its capabilities in the "heavenly art" as it is now for its wealth and business enterprise. All ready for the choruses!

A Battle of Baking Powders.

If any of our readers had dropped in at the Court-room of the United States Circuit Court in this City on an afternoon about two months ago, he would have seen a sight which we venture to say was never seen in a Court of justice before. He would have seen the Judge on the bench, and counsel learned in the law before him, and learned Professors skilled in science, all watching with interest the process of making and baking bread. Our readers must not think, however, that this was a scene in the struggle for woman's rights, and that these learned legal gentlemen, having taken alarm at the possibility of their being crowded out of the forensic arena by the incursion of feminine aspirants for its struggles and successes, were fitting themselves in advance for success in those domestic avocations which women will then, we suppose, have left to the inferior sex. The affair was a strictly legal one, and the bread-making was a piece of testimony in a trial, as uncommon perhaps, certainly we trust no heavier, than the reading of Griffith Gaunt to the jury in CHARLES READ's libel suit.

The suit was a contest over a patent for a baking powder, alleged to have been invented by Professor HORSFORD, and our readers will find a note of Judge BLATCHFORD's decision of the case in our legal column. It was decided against the owners of the Professor's invention, on the ground that this "pulverulent phosphoric acid," or "form of acid, phosphate of lime, or of mixed phosphate of lime and phosphoric acid," as he calls it, or baking powder, (as our readers will probably call it, with more satisfaction to themselves,) which he claimed to have invented, was not a mere thing, but had been discovered and made before—made in a different way from that which he had invented, but yet made so that he could not claim to have a patent for the article as a new substance. And inasmuch as the defendant made his baking powder by an entirely different process, and took an entirely different road of arriving at the same goal, the Court declined to interfere with him.

There is, however, in the decision, a suggestion of other suits, and perhaps of victories, yet in store for the Professor. His patent claimed not only the baking powder itself and the process of making it. It claimed also the using of such a powder in bread making. And the Court says that whether he is entitled to such a patent remains to be tested when he brings suit for any infringement of that claim in his patent. If he is entitled to such a patent, the substantial fruits of victory may come to him yet, for if every one who uses the defendant's article in bread making is liable, as an infringer of the plaintiff's patent, it would be apt to interfere with the sale of the article for bread-making purposes. The main and obvious difficulty is how the Rhode Island corporation, which owns the Professor's invention, is to find out who has infringed it. They cannot send agents into the kitchens to watch the manufacture of bread and biscuit, or to examine the cupboards to see if there are empty boxes from which the defendant's baking powder has been used. They might offer a reward to servant girls, who have used it, to inform against their mistresses, and yet would the action for infringement lie, in such a case, against the lady of the house? Or if the husband was sued for it, what damages would a jury give against him, unless it appeared that he attended to the household arrangements and knew what baking powder was used in the family? Manifestly it would have been much better for the plaintiff to have been able to maintain an action against the makers of rival baking powders than to be thus turned over to actions against the innumerable users of them. What would the sewing-machine patents have been worth if the owners of them had been compelled to sustain them by bringing a suit against every woman who used a sewing machine to make a shirt?

English Pauperism and "Assisted Emigration."

The great question of London pauperism has been once more "brought before the authorities" in England, as the phrase goes. But unfortunately the authorities in question were neither far-seeing statesmen, profound economists, nor warm-hearted philanthropists, but only the guardians of the poor for the various parishes comprised within the metropolis, assembled in solemn conclave in order to consider the proposal recently made to levy a special metropolitan rate in order to assist the destitute and unemployed thousands of the London poor to emigrate. There were present a few of the noblemen, M. P.'s, and clergymen who, in exceptional cases, take the thankless office of guardian, but the conference evidently consisted in the main of the average London guardian—a being about as capable of understanding his true duties or interests as he would be of performing a philanthropic action. The question before the meeting was whether support should be given to a proposal for levying a rate throughout the metropolis, the proceeds of which should be spent in granting sums not exceeding £10 in assisting the emigration of any person who had been settled in any metropolitan parish for at least three years; this last provision being made to obviate an influx of paupers into the metropolis in order to take advantage of such assistance. As might have been expected, the meeting separated without coming to any conclusion, after a good deal of purposeless discussion. There were, however, one or two very noticeable statements made by speakers, which deserve, and must ultimately command, attention in higher quarters. Lord A. CHURCHILL mentioned that the paupers of London had increased in number since 1866 from 100,000 to 130,000—or thirty per cent. in four years; and Colonel TORRENS, M. P., stated that he would rather be a black savage in Australia than an agricultural laborer in Devonshire, where average wages for the hardest kind of manual labor come to eight or nine shillings—say $2—a week.

From city, town and village in once "merrie" England, we hear but the same sad story of misery, pauperism, and starvation. It is no longer a local question, even in the metropolis, for the interests of town and country are too closely interwoven for their cases to be taken separately. The whole of England is suffering from an excess of population, aggravated, perhaps, but not caused, by a temporary local congestion of labor; and the only remedy for the evil is wholesale emigration.

How to provide the means for such emigration is the question which must occupy Parliamentary attention before long. Pauperism, swollen every day by fresh victims, is now rapidly bringing whole classes who have long been struggling on the verge down to its own level by the enormous demands made on them for the support of the absolutely destitute. Even the most selfish instincts of the British rate-payer are appealed to, when he is told that for a payment of ten pounds a permanent burden on the parish can be finally got rid of. The time, we are convinced, cannot be far off when there will be a rush of emigration from England like that which has so long taken place from the sister island, and that not of irreclaimable paupers or the physically infirm, but of sound-bodied laborers and skilled artisans, leaving their country in search of work which they cannot obtain at home. Well, Australia will absorb a few; Canada may detain a few others for a time on their way; but the great centre of gravitation for men of this kind we have referred to is the United States. We shall be glad, for the sake of England as well as our own, to hear that measures have been taken for carrying out the scheme of Government assistance to emigrants. Proper precautions will, of course, be taken against the landing on our shores of members of the pauper-criminal classes, or of those who are prima facie incompetent to maintain themselves under any circumstances; but for all who are capable of work, and willing to seek it, there is ample room and a hearty welcome.

MINOR TOPICS.

We might not be so ready to purchase Cuba from Spain as the London Times imagines. It would not be worth while for Spain to sell her colony unless a large price could be obtained; and, though our financial condition is considered strong at present, we have no hundreds of millions in gold to offer for new territory. In fact, we do not believe the American people would be willing to enlarge their debt and increase their taxation, in order to obtain Cuba.

Oh, fellow-citizens, beware! For what an awful warning from the gallows was given by the wretch who was hung in St. Louis last Friday. What did he say had brought him to the gallows? Did he say it was "rum?" Or what did he hold up as the cause of his untimely end? In his own words we must tell how, standing on the gallows, just before the fatal moment, he exclaimed, "Look where I am to-day; look where I am, my friends. See what a woman will bring a man to. See that wife of mine; she brought me here."

The latest accounts of the defalcation of BALLARD, the Secretary of the Security Fire Insurance Company, are not only remarkable as showing the singular treatment of a presumed culprit, but also as a literary illustration of the Celtic idea of "hitting easy." It is first announced, as a pleasant way of saying that the Insurance Company has consented to a compromise, or what a legal mind would impertinently pronounce a "compounded felony," that "it is not probable that any prosecution will be commenced against the defaulting officer, his sureties being amply able to secure the Company against all loss." And as indicating the purely unselfish motive of the defaulting Secretary, it is published that "no part of the $26,000 was used by Mr. BALLARD, except in stock speculations, and he has appropriated no portion of the amount to his own private use." And, finally, we naturally come to this unique announcement of the culprit's remorse: "Mr. BALLARD is now at his home in Connecticut, and, it is said, is deeply mortified at the position in which he finds himself." All this is a terrible trifling with the rights of others and the dignity of the law; and as far as we can see it is the Insurance Company which is instancy to the alleged culprit deliberately wrongs the public.

We suppose the cost of ocean telegraphy will be lowered through the influence of the French Cable; but we are sure it would be good policy for the new Company to put its rates as low as can be conveniently done, with a fair profit. It is probable, however, that we will have to wait for the completion of the new American Cable before we hear of any very serious reduction in prices. We understand, that, in connection with this projected American Cable, there will be new and far more rapid means of transmission, which will permit the cost of ocean telegraphy to be brought down to a very reasonable point.

Secretary BOUTWELL alleges that he is anxious for the punishment of his subordinates who have been engaged in the revenue frauds in New-Orleans; but a dispatch which we had yesterday said it was not believed in New-Orleans "that the investigations would be prosecuted and the criminals brought to justice, on account of the high position of some of the officials implicated." We consider it very necessary that the people of New-Orleans, as well as the revenue officials throughout the country, should get some light on this matter. The conviction and punishment of these revenue defrauders—especially if they are persons of high position—would have an exceedingly beneficial influence upon the revenue and morals of the country.

There are so many people who write books which they cannot get published, that we should think there would be abundant employment for the "Authors' Protective Association," which proposes to undertake the publication of the approved works of those who may join it and pay their dues. Any person may become a member, shareholder and voter on the payment of $10; and those who first become members will have a prior right to the examination of their manuscripts, which will be done promptly and conscientiously. In case of profit from a work judged worth printing, the author shall receive three-fourths of it, and in case of loss, such loss will be borne by the Association. We cannot conceive of anything more attractive than this to authors who are able to write popular and profitable books; and, at the same time, we cannot conceive of anything more satisfactory to those authors who get books published that turn out to be profitless. The President of the Association is Mr. PETER GERARD, and its counselor Mr. H. GREELEY; but its active spirit appears to be MRS. MARY KYLE DALLAS, who is a lady highly spoken of for practical ability as well as literary culture and sound judgment.

It appears that the Spanish people are rallying to the support of the Liberal Government, and against the Carlists and others who are seeking its overthrow. We have no doubt that the authorities can command the support of the great body of the people as well as of the army; and, in fact, we do not believe that there is at this time any chance of the success of a revolution, whether it be got up in the name of Democracy or in the interest of Bourbonism.

The ventilation of our public school-houses has been under consideration by the Board of Education. Reports on the subject have been received from nearly all the school principals; and upon these Mr. GROSS has made a report setting forth the imperfect ventilation that exists in nearly all the school-houses, and the consequent suffering endured by the children. We are glad to see that the Board has taken up this important matter at this time; and it is advisable that steps be speedily taken to correct the evil, so that when the children resume their studies they may not do so at the expense of their health and constitution.

If Mr. GRANVILLEY FITZHARDINGE BERKELEY, aristocrat, veteran habitué of London clubs, sportsman, author and amateur pugilist, has warmly taken up the cause of English ladies with regard to the obnoxious "wire cage" in the House of Commons which so sadly limits their opportunities of hearing and seeing in that assembly, and has in consequence been presented with a piece of plate by two hundred of his clients. In a letter to a misogynistic member of Parliament, he declares that the hostility to the removal of the grating proceeds mostly from married men, who dread giving their wives the power of ascertaining whether their husbands really spend their nights in attending to their Parliamentary duties or not. We regret to hear, on so good an authority, that there is room for suspicion in the matter, but rejoice in feeling assured, from the free admission of ladies to the galleries at Washington, that our Senators and Representatives are at least above suspicion in this respect.

Now that the Irish Church is stripped of her old attributes of power and badges of distinction, and stands before the world in puris naturalibus, ecclesiastically speaking, the London Times gravely congratulates her on her disengaged condition, and says she has now, for the first time in her history, "a really honest and independent character." No doubt there is a deal of truth in this compliment; but the naked subject of it will probably find a deal of irony in it, too.

The London journals speak favorably of NAPOLEON's late concessions, and some of them ask if the French are really capable of being parliamentary. The Morning Post asks if it is possible that the members of the Legislative Body can exercise the right of "interpellation" with "the phlegm which characterises the evening catechism of the House of Commons." Beyond a doubt the French legislative manner seems nearly as fit for a field of battle as for a Parliament; and if those "Gauls and Franks" continue to give way to their vivacious propensities, they will certainly be "prompted" again, and very few out of their own peculiar atmosphere will be able to feel sorry for them.

The English policy as regards China is undergoing a marked change—as may be seen in the conversations of the House of Commons and the commentaries of the English journals. The "gunboat policy" is discountenanced, and China is not to be managed like India. There are how too many "Powers" ready to take part in any bullying work, and one great Power has given the key-note of the controversy. Mr. BURLINGAME has prevented a grand scramble, and the common sense of the English is bringing them round to our Western point of view. This is certainly the most powerful American influence ever exercised—is a direct and tangible way—upon the nations of the older continents.

There is apparently another Fenian "alarm" in the Queen's "Dominion." Ottawa has sent a lightning message to Toronto, ordering the gunboats on the lakes to be ready for service. All this, no doubt, comes of the late "rumpus" and conflict in the New-York Courts over the $50,000 Fenian cash now in the hands of a receiver. The outbreak of the Fenians, we assure our neighbors, is confined to this City, being an intermeine and fratricidal strife, as far as it goes—but certainly not so far as the frontiers of Canada; and we believe that "gunboat policy" is as little called for at present on the lakes as it is in the interior of China.

A writer in the Washington Herald proposes the introduction to the Southern States of the date palm, the sugar palm, and the cocoanut palm—these palms furnishing fruit, sugar, oil, fibre, &c. He argues in favor of trying at least the experiment of introducing these India palms, and he holds that, if properly planted and cared for, they will flourish and become profitable in the South.

Mr. GLADSTONE is reported to be seriously unwell, and that on the very day on which the great triumph of his life was consummated by the royal assent to the Irish Church bill. We regret, but are not surprised at the fact. Since his memorable declaration, eighteen months ago, that "the Irish Church must cease to exist," the strain on his mind, energy and physique—to say nothing of the trials to which his temper has been subjected by rancorous and unscrupulous opposition—has been incessant, and it is no wonder that he should have temporarily broken down when the urgent sense of duty and the stimulus of excitement ceased to exert their sustaining influence. But the end of the session is at hand, and we hope that nothing will interfere to prevent his enjoyment of well-earned relaxation, and his restoration to the health and energy which he devotes so assiduously to the best interests of his country.

THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Battle of the Bishops in Chicago—Letters from Bishop Whitehouse and Bishop Cummins.

To the Editor of the Chicago Tribune:

It is very painful to me to find myself brought into such publicity, in accepting an invitation to preach in Trinity Church, and to minister to a flock once under my pastoral charge. Justice to myself, however, demands that I should make a simple statement of facts connected therewith, and I respectfully ask a place for this communication in your columns.

On the 1st day of July I received a letter from the junior warden of Trinity Church, asking me if I could officiate for a few Sundays for my old parishioners during the absence of their rector. I replied by telegraph that I would officiate in Trinity Church on the next Sunday, July 4, and upon my arrival in Chicago I informed the same warden that I would be with them for only one, or at the most two more Sundays.

I preached in Trinity Church on the 4th of July, both morning and evening. The morning discourse was based upon St. Luke, xvii., 20th and 21st verses, and the sermon was one which I had delivered in Grace Church, New-York, during the General Convention of last year, and in other churches. In the course of the sermon I alluded to the sadness which had depressed many noble workers in God's kingdom, in the contemplation of the trials and discouragements of the Church of Christ, and quoted Dr. ARNOLD's (of Rugby) memorable words, viz.: "When I think that the Church I could sit down and pine and die; after so much of individual soul that must be saved, and it is that which is addressed in the Gospel." I then alluded to the trouble in our own Church; and charged that they arose from the efforts so continuously made to reinstate into the Church doctrines and ceremonies which the reformers of the Anglican Church utterly rejected and discarded; errors in faith and practice from which the Church was purified only at the cost of untold suffering of our Protestant forefathers. I never alluded to "Catholicity, nor did the subject enter into my thoughts upon the occasion.

The Bishop of Illinois, on the 12th day of July, called upon the junior warden, who had invited me in behalf of the vestry to come to Chicago, to inform him that I should not be allowed to occupy the pulpit of Trinity Church again. The vestry of the Church were called together, and a strong earnest and determined effort was made to induce them to accede to Bishop WHITEHOUSE's demand, and exclude me from their pulpit. They were warned of the danger of adopting an opposite course, and told that they had no right to invite any one to the country, their pulpit to whom the Bishop objected. The canons of the Church upon the matter are too plain to admit of a doubt. They provide that, in the absence of the rector of a Church, the Church wardens and vestrymen, or a majority of them, may invite "any clergyman of this Church" (Canon 1, Title I., section 6) to officiate for them, only taking care that he be of "sufficient evidence of his being duly ordained to minister in this Church." (Canon II, Title I.) Had the vestry yielded to the demand made upon them, they would have affixed a stigma of disgrace upon the name of the Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, whose only offence had been an earnest denunciation of an attempt to restore the errors and corruptions of the ante-Reformation period of the Church's history. This the vestry refused to do, and invited me to occupy the pulpit again. This action has brought from the Bishop of Illinois the following letter. Although I might say much in my defence against its charges of "malevolent feeling," of "a disposition not to act as a gentleman and courteous," of "aggression," of "criminal and personal interference," I am content to abide by the judgment of my many friends in this city, who will bear witness whether they have found in me any such spirit; and to await the judgment of that Friend, who is "the Great Bishop and Shepherd of Souls." I am very faithfully yours,

GEORGE D. CUMMINS,
Assistant Bishop of Kentucky.

LETTER OF BISHOP WHITEHOUSE.

CHICAGO, July 20, 1859.

To the Right Rev. George D. Cummins, Assistant Bishop of Kentucky.

RIGHT REVEREND AND DEAR SIR: I am informed that, on Monday evening last, by a majority of one in the vestry of Trinity Church, in this city, after a discussion of nearly two hours' meeting, you have been invited to fill the pulpit of that Church for certain Sundays during the absence of the rector.

It has involved the direct issue before that body whether the earnest advice of the Bishop should be followed in a matter of this grievous course; or, whether, in defiance of that counsel, an invitation should be extended to you, which, with full knowledge of the facts, you have solicited.

This is connected with a train of interference in my diocese—of official and personal attack on myself—which has largely tended to disturb its harmony and create vexed questions of spiritual bitterness.

The aggressions of last Winter, against which a protest was raised in vain, not only by myself, but by the unanimous voice of the Standing Committee, might have an explanation of some weight in your esteem.

The continued aggression of the present can admit of none. It has degenerated into incidents which subject you to imputations of malevolent feeling, as well as of the disregard of what is gentlemanly and courteous.

The principles which are involved in this interference and aggression I mean to submit, as you are aware, for such adjudication by our peers as they may deem to be equivalent.

I have avoided, as far as in me lay, pursuing its course through any personal altercation.

I shall, under no circumstances, resort to any penal charges, how satisfied soever I may be that reasonable cause for the same may exist.

I must content myself, in the name of God and His Church, with entering my solemn protest against acts and temporary derogatory to the dignity of our office, our consoling brotherhood, the peace of the Church, and the well-being of the portion of it committed by the Great Head to my unworthy charge.

I therefore, hereby, as far as I can, to give it lawful and moral weight; and violating, I trust, no post-claim of fraternal courtesy in the painful exigency so pertinaciously thrust upon me, do protest against your visiting my diocese to officiate in any manner within its bounds.

And may the blessed and merciful Lord bless us each for our mistakes or misdeeds in these humiliating issues. Remaining faithfully yours in our common bonds,

(Signed) HENRY J. WHITEHOUSE,
Bishop of Illinois.

AFFAIRS IN SPAIN.

The Debate in the Cortes on the Address—Speech—Speeches—Threat of the Democrats to Pass Over to the Republicans—Fine on his Knees to Titan—The Historical Critics, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

MADRID, Monday, July 11, 1859.

The scene in the Cortes on Wednesday afternoon last, after I had posted my letter to you, was one I shall never forget. For excitement and confusion it has had no equal in the many stormy scenes which the conflicting elements of the Spanish legislature have given rise to. Invective, recrimination, slander, jealousy, pity, contempt and supplication constituted the leading characteristics of the debate. Its ostensible object was a vote of censure upon the new Minister of Grace and Justice, Señor Don MARTIN DE HERRERA, for his circular of the 4th instant relative to judicial appointments, in which he was accused of violating the Constitution by arrogating to the Ministry, or rather to himself as Minister, the filling up of those appointments for life without waiting for the Cortes to exercise the right of laying down the bases on which they should be made, in an "organic law of the Tribunals" yet to be submitted, discussed and promulgated. After mature deliberation, PRIM decided to assume for the Ministry the responsibility of the objectionable circular and make the vote of censure a Cabinet question. It was not, therefore, so much the circular itself, or the disgrace of the Ministry who issued it, as the very existence of the Prim Administration that was involved in the discussion of last Wednesday.

When the Cortes assembled, Señor FIGUERAS (Republican) said that for some days considerable disquietude had been created in political circles by the crisis which the conduct of a certain Minister had provoked. The Republicans had not been active, inasmuch as the agitation against the Minister in question had not originated with them, but had spontaneously broken out among the members of the majority. The Republicans desired to afford all the aid in their power to the elimination from the Cortes of all those elements which were unsound and inimical to the public welfare, and which were producing alarm among those who felt interested in the consolidation of the revolution. They believed coalitions were good to destroy, but not to build up, and that a Ministry composed of opposite elements, like the present Ministry, now gave, was highly dangerous to their liberties. He wished to ask if the President of the Council (General Prim) and the Ministers were decided to maintain the decree of the Minister of Grace and Justice (Herrera) published in the Gaceta of the 4th inst., in which he laid down the rules of appointment and promotion in the judicial career? President RIVERO observed that a vote of censure was on the table, but it could not be discussed until Friday. Minister HERRERA said he was moved by his decree and placed himself at the disposition of the Cortes. There commenced an angry discussion as to why the debate should be put off till Friday, in which President RIVERO, Señor FIGUERAS and others took part. Finally it was settled by an appeal to the Chamber, and it was decided that the debate should take place there and then. The proposal was introduced in this shape:

"The undersigned ask the Cortes to declare null and void, of no value, and contrary to the laws and maxims belonging exclusively to the Cortes Constituent, the decree of the Minister of Grace and Justice relating to the appointments of the judiciary."

Vicente Romero Giron, Julian Martinez y Martinez, Joaquin Baeza, Manuel Becerra, Gabriel Rodriguez, Eugenio Maria de Hostos, Manuel Ortiz y Sanz.

PALACE OF THE CORTES, 8th July, 1859.

Señor ROMERO GIRON, as one of the signers, introduced the motion in a long and able speech. As one of the Committee of Fifteen, he had been charged with the preparation of the Constitution, he showed how contrary Señor HERRERA's circular was to a proper interpretation of the Constitution. He was replied to by Señor HERRERA himself, who, of course, defended his circular. A long altercation took place between the two. Admiral TOPETE next put in his oar. He was quite willing to take upon himself all the responsibility of the circular. Great confusion prevailed during TOPETE's speech. He was constantly interrupted by ROMERO GIRON, who proved himself vociferous for the easier Minister, and completely "shut him up!"

Señor MORALES DIAZ said the circular opened so many doors to patronage and favor that all the conquests of September might be lost through the character it would impart to the judicial power. According to his idea of the spirit of the Constitution only those should be appointed to the immovable places in the judiciary, who had passed through the ordeal to be laid down by the Cortes in the organic law of the tribunals. Señor CASTELLAR said:

"Having been alluded to directly and by name in this debate, I rise to state in a few words the position occupied by the Republican minority in this assembly. We believe that as the Minister of Gobernacion (GAGASTA) invaded the powers of the Cortes in his circular regarding the electoral law, the Constitution, so, also, the Ministers of Grace and Justice (HERRERA) and of Marine (TOPETE) have invaded them in the decrees they published on Sunday last. We believe that principles ought to stand above persons—that above and beyond persons and name and interests there should always be placed the eternal questions of principles. Alas for this Chamber, and alas for the national sovereignty, if it should permit our rights to fall shackled at the feet of one person, even though this person wears the sword of a victorious General! But it certainly is not the question which we are debating to-day which moves us to pass a vote of censure against the Minister of Grace and Justice; we have other and more powerful motives. We do not oppose him because of our knowledge of what he is, for we form no prejudgment of persons, nor of the political source whence he comes, though we have not forgotten its history; but we oppose him for doing what he has done and for saying what he has said in his celebrated circular, in which, disregarding the first chapter of the Constitution, he has destroyed individual rights, the eternal symbols of our intelligence and our life. Personally, we respect him; but we can never consent or permit our rights to be interpreted in a reactionary manner. We do not combat him because we wish to replace him. Power is a forbidden thing to us, so long as the form of government which is in harmony with our conscience does not triumph. We compel him in order that he may retain the trust of office and substituted by another Minister who will interpret individual rights as some of the members of the Committee on the Constitution interpret them, and regulate the tribunals by democratic principles, which, if they were yesterday revolutionary because they were merely aspirations, are to-day conservative, for we have inscribed them at the head of our Constitution and our laws." Minister HERRERA said he was glad the Republicans had also joined against him, as he liked to encounter all his enemies at once. TOPETE thanked Señor CASTELLAR and the Republicans for having coupled him in their censures with his colleagues. Next came a speech from Señor ORIO in favor of the proposition. But the speech of the day was made by Señor MARTOS, the leader of the Democrats. Sure that done all he could to reconcile the party, and had even offered a portfolio to MARTOS, but in vain. Señor MARTOS at great length, explained wherein he thought the Unionists and the Progressists were departing from the spirit of the revolution—the cause so that it was the duty of the leaders of the Democrats whether they could continue to be parties to the coalition of the majority. He was very severe on Señor RIOS ROSAS and the Unionists, and scarcely less so on PRIM and the Progressists. He accused the Unionists of reactionary tendencies, and the Progressists of inclining more to them than to the Democrats. Following up this theme, he created quite a sensationally intimating that in view of the necessities of the situation, the Democrats might have to go into opposition by uniting themselves with Republicans! In fact, he made a temporary farewell to the Progressists, which produced a most exciting scene. The split was evident and imminent. The junction of Democrats and Republicans would give such a numerical strength to the opposition as to prove a complete check to the movements of the Unionists and Progressists, and the addition of such able and powerful speakers as Señors MARTOS and RIVERA to the Republicans would afford a great impetus to the cause of the latter. MARTOS said the Progressists did not seem to comprehend that in entering on the path they were following, they were leaving them; also Democrats and marching with the most reactionary elements, and being placed in the dilemma of choosing between the Union Liberals and the Democrats, they were choosing the former and breaking with the latter. But he would not quite say "farewell" (adios) to the Progressists. He would say "until by-and-by" (hasta luego.) This significant and well-understood allusion caused great agitation, and elicited from portions of the Chamber loud applause. "Here we will remain reunited with all the benches of the Opposition," said MARTOS; "here we will remain reunited with all the benches of the Opposition—here, I, for all, will wait, until we are again called to the Ministry, to which we have been twice in the streets and on the barricades of Madrid, on its inauguration! Yes—this we will do when the machine arrives! On the day of that battle all of us will join together once more, from the Minister of Marine (TORRES) who to-day is so irritated against me, to Señor CASTELAR and the Republicans—all of us will be found by the side of the Minister of War (PRIM), and of all those who defend the revolution of September! All this, however, does not prevent us saying that the circular, and decree of the Minister of Grace and Justice are attacks on the Constitution!"

Trembling with excitement, and pale and earnest, PRIM rose and almost tearfully said: "What, what, what, gentlemen, do I ask, to take part in this debate? I rise truly affected. I, who am not accustomed to lose my self-possession! But on hearing the words of Señor MARTOS—which I did not think it was possible in any manner could be pronounced in this place—on hearing Señor MARTOS say (After Prim's eloquent appeal, he fell by which the revolution triumphed, he was unable to speak. Full of excitement, Prim broke out: "Ah! am I mistaken, then? If it will be a great pleasure to me to find that I have mistaken Señor MARTOS. If he will give me the consolation, he will take a great load from my mind."

Señor MARTOS—If the President permits me, I will give the explanation the President of the Council of Ministers desires.

PRESIDENT—Proceed.

Señor MARTOS—The President of the Council of Ministers has no reason to be so affected. He has understood me in a manner which I regret, but has not understood even my thoughts. I have said to the Progressists not "Adios," but "Asta luego," (until by-and-by,) and that is true. I am not, and my party are not departing from or deserting the majority. We are only standing by our principles, our antecedents, our terms, and shall remain in our accustomed place defending what we have always defended, seeing with pain the movement which is being made from the centre of the Chamber (Unionist) to the extreme right, (Ministerial,) and hoping it will turn itself toward the left centre, (Democrats,) and even toward the quasi extreme left, (Republican.)

Admiral TOPETE—Quasi extreme!

MARTOS—Well, then, take the phrase without the "quasi" if there be any satisfaction in supposing it! We are not going elsewhere. We are in our right place, and on this most important question, on seeing that our friends, the Progressists, are turning aside, as we believe they have been for some time, I said to them, "Asta luego."

PRIM—Señor MARTOS has only repeated what he had before, but he is greatly mistaken as to these evolutions. There are no kinds of evolution among us. We are doing nothing but what we have been doing since September—to be very liberal, to do our utmost for the development of its principles—to preserve the union in the majority for its objects. We have been our constant efforts. When I see so important a man and distinguished a patriot rise in the hall rumor to apostrophize thus one side of the Chamber and to turn to the other? Is he an advanced sentinel appointed to guard the liberties of the country? Have not the Ministry and the majority which hands are red with the revolution of September the same intention? which he arrogates to himself, that of guarding the liberties of liberty! [Cries of "Good! Good!" and applause.] There was no reason to fire the mine which exploded the other day through the words of Señor RIOS ROSAS, and no occasion to repeat the operation still later through the first decree of the Minister of Grace and Justice. To-day I have seen with pain the same thing attempted by virtue of the decree published by the same Minister last Sunday. I say to Señor MARTOS and his friends that, to my understanding, they have no occasion for the attitude they have taken. If decrees displeased them, they, being members of the majority, and political and personal friends of the Ministers, should have approached them, and, above all, myself, to ask explanations, which would have been given them, and all would have found satisfactory results. I repeat my question: What motive has Señor MARTOS and his worthy companions for the attitude they have assumed to-day?

After this piece of banter and defiance, which is so characteristic of PRIM, he attentively watched its effects on the benches of the Democrats. Representations had been made on the part of MARTOS and HERRERA gave him to understand that the line of reply which he had adopted had not been successful with them. Quickly changing his tone, he said: "I ask, I supplicate Señor MARTOS, and I will ask and supplicate it of him a hundred times if necessary, to take all circumstances into consideration, and also to take into account the consequences his words may have; for, according to what has fallen from him, he is to-day in opposition! If the fact be not so, let him gratify me by telling me it I am mistaken. Opposition! No, no, no! I repeat it, and in one case they will go on until the coalition component of the three elements is dissolved. I do not wish it dissolved. I will do all I can to prevent that unfortunate result. If Señor MARTOS will indicate any kind of sacrifice or abnegation that will remedy it, I will be present in accepting it. The majority cannot, ought not, to be dissolved! It would destroy liberty and the revolution. In the name of the country and of liberty, I ask Señor MARTOS to reflect well upon his words, to withdraw them and to offer the embrace of reconciliation to the majority—the only means by which all may be saved!"

Señor MARTOS replied—"The President of the Council of Ministers has harped upon the idea that I and my friends are going to break the phalanx of the majority, and go into opposition. He is mistaken. We are not. We will offer no opposition to an act which we believe to be an attack on the rights of the Assembly. The Government has made that act their own. I am sorry for it, but I shall sustain Señor ROMERO GIRON's motion." [Cries of "Vote, vote," from the Unionists interrupted him; it was for some time a war cries of "No, no," "Order," "Silence," &c., and much confusion.

Señor MARTOS—Ah, I see, gentlemen, the Conservatives wish to appeal to the supreme law of the vote.

After a few words from PRIM the vote was taken. The interest was intense, for it was well known that at two or three caucus meetings of the majority such determined opposition was manifested to Minister HERRERA and such promises of condemnation of his objectionable circular were made as to render it almost certain that, aided by the votes of the Republicans, the vote of censure would be carried.

The event, however, proved otherwise. At the last moment the extraordinary efforts put forth by PRIM and the diligent exertions of the "whips," caused so many to turn from their purpose that when the votes were cast the motion of Señor ROMERO GIRON was "refused to be taken into consideration" by a majority of 144 to 86! Thus Minister HERRERA and his circular, and the PRIM Ministry in general were sustained. But it was only a nominal victory after all. It was in reality a moral defeat, for PRIM finds it quite impossible to carry on the Government with the Ministers he has, and he finds it almost equally impossible to replace them by others and at the same time to maintain the coalition. He has been unceasing in his efforts to remodel the Cabinet. Meeting after meeting and conference after conference have been held, but, up to the moment I write, without any practical result. MARTOS and HERRERA, whom PRIM wants badly to join him, positively refuse. It is said in this morning's papers that the "crisis" will be put an end to to-day, but I have my doubts.

Much comment has been excited by President RIVERO's conduct on the occasion of the vote of censure. It was well known he was one of the principal getters up of it, and it was even expected he would speak in its favor. He kept the chair all the time the debate was proceeding and until the voting began. Just before it closed he gave up the chair to Vice-President CANTERO and left the House! He was too much of a Democrat to vote against a motion he himself had prepared, but he was too much of a coward to vote against the Prim Ministry! This was the secret. General MILANO DEL BOSCH voted against the motion, though he was the head of a deputation of the majority who had gone to PRIM a day or two before and told him that if Minister HERRERA and his decree were not both repudiated, they would join in the vote of censure!

The Republicans held a "demonstration" at Barcelona, a few days since, at which they carried banners bearing the inscriptions, "No more Kings!" "Viva la Republica." The Captain-General of Catalonia, Señor NOUVILAS, has been dismissed "for not having prevented exhibitions contrary to the form of government established by the Constitution!" He is a Liberal, though not a Republican, and his dismissal has created a good deal of dissatisfaction. At one time it looked as if public order would be disturbed in Barcelona in consequence of it, but it has not. The troops, however, were under arms two or three days and nights. The General's successor is not as yet named.

My last letter will probably reach you at the same time with this. The explanation of the fact is to be found in the following paragraph from the Correspondencia of the 8th:

"The postal train, which left Madrid yesterday for France, was not able to connect with the French train, having been delayed by the increased number of passengers that went in it."

What a commentary on the manner in which public business of all sorts is managed here!

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The rain of the past few days has sadly interfered with the auctioneers' plans. Two country sales were advertised, one for Monday, the other for yesterday. Both were commenced but neither completed.

The sale at Kensington Park, Long Branch, by Messrs. A. J. BLEECKER SON & Co., would probably have been a great success. A goodly number of persons assembled, and they seemed to be in a buying humor. Not so many were present, of course, as would have attended had the day been clear. When the boat left New-York the clouds were heavy, and the appearances indicated a steady rain. Determined though to fulfill their engagements, the auctioneers commenced the sale; but, after some thirty odd lots had been knocked down, the rain fell so heavily, and the surroundings were so unfavorable, that it was decided to postpone offering the remainder until some future day. Due notice will be given in our advertising columns when the sale will be resumed.

Yesterday at Whitestone, L. I., Messrs. LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY had, so far as it went, a very successful sale. Probably 600 persons took the boat, and the sail up the river was heartily enjoyed. This mode of traveling is much more popular than the railroad. The excursionists can move about, compare notes, chat with each other, and exchange ideas, and they arrive on the grounds, usually, fresher and in better humor, than after a hot dusty ride in the cars. The trip was made in good time. The property is very beautiful, the first impressions received by the visitors were good, and after they had partaken of the very bountiful lunch provided, were in as fine humor as the most exacting auctioneer could desire. Mr. LAWRENCE entered heartily into the spirit of his work, everything and everybody looked smiling, and he appeared fatter and jollier than ever before. The sale commenced finely, the bidding was spirited, the prices good, and for two hours everything went on smoothly; then a very heavy shower commenced, and, in the midst of a decided success, they were obliged to quit and adjourn the sale until some future day, when Jupiter Pluvius may happen to feel in a more amiable humor, and permit them to proceed in peace. The day for continuing the sale has not yet been fixed; as soon as it is, our readers will be informed through our advertising columns.

A PACIFIC RAILWAY

GOLD LOAN

$6,500,000.

We beg leave to announce that we have accepted the agency of the

KANSAS PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.

For the sale of its

New Seven Per Cent. Thirty-Year Gold Loan, Free of Tax.

This Loan amounts to $6,500,000.

First Mortgage Land-Grant and Sinking Fund Bonds,

secured upon the extension of the Railway from near Ellsworth, in Kansas, to Denver, Colorado, a distance of 287 miles, of which twelve miles are completed, and the rest in under construction. It is also a mortgage upon the rolling stock and franchises of this new-class Railway now running through the State of Kansas. And in successful operation for 457 miles west of the Missouri River, and earning already enough to meet all of its expenses and existing obligations, besides

More than the Interest upon this new Loan.

In addition to this the bonds are also secured by a first mortgage of the Government Land Grant of three million acres, extending in alternate sections on either side of the track, from the 100th mile post in Kansas to Denver. The proceeds of the sale of these lands are to be invested by the Trustees in the 7 per cent. Bonds themselves up to 110, or in United States Bonds as A Sinking Fund for the redemption of the Bonds.

The lands embrace some of the finest portions of the magnificent Territory of Colorado, including a coal vein and pinery. The Company also holds as an asset another track of Three Millions of Acres in the State of Kansas, and although not pledged as a security for this loan, their possession adds largely to the Company's wealth and credit. We estimate the Value of the Company's Property, Covered by This Mortgage, at $22,000,000, Net, While the Loan is Merely $6,500,000.

The bonds have

THIRTEEN YEARS TO RUN,

from May 1, 1869, and will pay

SEVEN PER CENT. INTEREST IN GOLD, semi-annually, on May 1 and Nov. 1, and are

Free From Government Taxation,

the Company paying the tax.

(The Principal of the loan is made Payable, in Gold, in the City of New-York, but each coupon will

Be Payable in Frankfort, London, or New-York, at the option of the holder, without notice, at the following rates:

On $1,000 Bond in New-York...$35 (gold) each half year.
On $1,000 Bond in London.....£7 ss. 10d. each half year.
On $1,000 Bond in Frankfort.....7 florins and 10 kreutzers each half year.

The agents of the loan, before accepting the trust, had the condition of the road, and the country through which it runs, carefully examined. They are happy to give the loan an emphatic indorsement as a

FIRST-CLASS INVESTMENT

in every respect, perfectly sure, and in some essentials even Better than Government Securities.

The bonds will be sold for the present at 96, and accrued Interest, both in Currency, the agents reserving the right to advance the rate.

The attention of investors is invited to these well-secured bonds, which we recommend as one of the most profitable investments in the market.

Gold and Government Securities taken in payment at their market value, without commission.

Pamphlets, with maps giving full information, sent on application.

MACOUPIN COUNTY TEN PER CENT. BONDS.—HOWES & MACY, No. 30 Wall-st., offer for sale bonds of Macoupin County, Illinois, issued for the building of a Court-house, bearing interest at the rate of ten per cent. per annum. Coupons payable semi-annually in New-York. These bonds are considered first-class, and very desirable for investors.

ATTENTION IS INVITED TO THE great inducements offered to Savings Banks and others by the Kansas Pacific Railway Loan, paying Seven per Cent. in gold, and free from Government taxation. Address DABNEY, MORGAN & CO., No. 52 Exchange-place, or M. K. JESUP & CO., No. 19 Pine-st., New-York, for circulars, maps and pamphlets.

FINANCIAL.

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD

FIRST MORTGAGE

CONVERTIBLE BONDS

OF THE

Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company,

OF ILLINOIS.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD AT THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, NEW-YORK. COUPONS PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER.

FREE OF GOVERNMENT TAX.

The Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad, upon whose property these bonds are issued, is now in process of construction, the terminal points being Cities of Danville and Pekin, both in Illinois, and length of road is 120 miles, of which 40 miles are made, $3,000,000. The grading, bridging, and all the work necessary to perfect a complete roadway has been actually done, and the rails for 40 miles are now on the road. The rapidly rising towns of Danville, and a portion of the road is now in successful operation. It is expected that the whole road will be completed early the coming Autumn.

These bonds are convertible into stock at par of the option of the holder, and may be registered in the name of the owner at any time if desired. The total amount of bonds issued is $2,000,000, and the security afforded is as follows, viz.: The road, when completed, will cost, at the very lowest estimate, a sum nearly equal to the total amount of the bonds to be issued, have been expended upon the road. The bonds, therefore, represent less than $18,000 per mile, are secured by a first mortgage on the whole road and entire property of the Company. The road runs east and west, on the line of the principal and oldest contiguous wheat road in the State, passing through several populous towns and cities, and the richest agricultural district in Illinois—in a west, through the cities of the Garden State. Its land bonuses alone will enable it to make it a first-class paying road, while, with its connections with many principal lines, its through trade must be such as to make it one of the most profitable in the country.

The road will be consolidated with the Rail from Danville to Indianapolis, making a line of 210 miles. At Indianapolis connections will be made with all the through lines to New-York and Baltimore; at Danville, with the Great Western, Wabash, and Western. In fact, the road will form a main link in the direct communication of the principal Atlantic cities with southern Illinois, with Keokuk, Burlington, Iowa, and through Chicago and the Pacific.

It will complete a direct line from Boston to Peoria, Keokuk, Burlington, Omaha and the far West, via Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, and the Bellefontaine Road; also, via the Erie, Atlantic and Great Western, to Dayton, Ohio; and via Indiana Central, to Indianapolis, Danville, Bloomington, &c., as well as from Philadelphia, via the Pennsylvania Central to Harrisburg, Pittsburg, Columbus, Dayton and Indianapolis.

It will form an important link in the communication of Indiana and the South with the Great West, the Northwest and the Pacific via Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to Parkersburg, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Danville and Peoria.

These, with the combined advantages of a certainty of a remunerative local business and a through business, which, as a connecting link, to so many diverging and principal lines, it must necessarily have, it is reasonable to presume that the earnings of this road must exceed, in proportion to its length, those of any other railroad in Illinois. The following table shows the earnings of some of the principal railroads in Illinois:

Railroads.	Miles road.	Earnings per mile.
Chicago, Alton and St. Louis	240	$12,000
Chicago and Northwestern	1,125	11,000
Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific	410	10,000
Chicago, Wabash and Western	225	7,300
Illinois Central	705	10,115

It is safe to estimate the receipts of the Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad for the first year at $15,000 per mile, or on 120 miles, $1,800,000.

FIRST YEAR.

Receipts, as estimated	$1,800,000
Estimated expenses as follows:
Operating, 40 per cent. on $1,800,000	$720,000
Interest on $2,000,000 gold bonds, 7 per cent	140,000
Premium, 40 per cent. on $140,000 gold	56,000
Sinking Fund, 1 per cent.	20,000— 936,000
Leaving a net profit over interest and expenses	$864,000

Or over 18 per cent. for dividends on the capital stock the first year of its operation. Without doubt, a progressive increase thereafter, each year, would be the result. The geographical location of the road is alone sufficient to convince all of its great value and usefulness.

The stock of the Rock Island and the Illinois Central, the Chicago and Alton, Burlington and Quincy Railroads, are selling at from 100 to 130 per cent., while none of them are more favorably located, and the competition with either is more greater than this can have. There is no reason why the stock of this road shall not be worth as much as either of the above. Hence the privilege of converting these bonds into stock of the Company at par may time desired greatly increase their value.

After having personally and thoroughly examined this road, we accepted the agency for negotiating its bonds. We now offer them at 95 and accrued interest in currency. In the interest of investors we recommend them as a reliable and safe security and profitable investment.

At the present price they pay 10 per cent. currency—the same amount of interest on the same money that is in Five-twenty Bonds—besides the advantage of being free from tax, and the prospect of a speedy advance in the stock of the road in completion, into which they have the option.

Government Bonds and Gold received at their market value in exchange without commission. Bonds forwarded by express free of charge.

For further information apply to the undersigned, financial agents of the Company.

NINTH REGIMENT EXCURSION.

Visit of the Command to Stamford, Conn.—A Fair Scare, a Pleasant Day and a Good Time—Interesting Scenes in the Town—A Grand Ball.

From Our Special Correspondent.

STAMFORD, Conn., Tuesday, July 27, 1869.

The Ninth Regiment New-York National Guard arrived in this borough this morning on a visit to the citizens of the village, and are in the full enjoyment of the festivities prepared for them by the Warden and Burgesses of the place.

Agreeably to orders issued by Brevet Brigadier-General WILCOX, those officers and members of the Ninth Regiment who intended to participate in the proposed excursion to Stamford, assembled at the regimental armory in Twenty-sixth-street, at 6 o'clock this morning, to the number of two hundred and eight, all attired in the new full uniform adopted by the command, and in light marching order. As soon as possible the battalion line was formed and put in motion for the steamer Stamford, specially chartered for the occasion, and awaiting the excursion battalion at the foot of East Twenty-eighth-street. The expeditions were the movements of the regiment that the entire command, and invited guests were aboard at 7:30 A. M., and the steamer proceeded up the Sound for this place.

The morning proved cloudy and sultry, though as we proceeded on our way the sun pierced the heavy banks of clouds and gave us the promise of a brilliant day. Breakfast was served to those wishing it in the cabin, and the boys contrived to have a very pleasant time on the up trip, being greatly aided therein by the enthusiastic greeting afforded them by the members of the New-York American Club, as we passed their spacious club-house at Greenwich, Conn. Having a fair tide our steamer progressed well on her difficult voyage, and succeeded in reaching Stamford wharf about 10:30 o'clock.

As soon as the steamer was made fast the Regimental Committee of Arrangements invited the Warden and Burgesses on board, and introduced them to General WILCOX and the officers of the regiment. Warden GEO. L. LOUNSBURY, being a man of few words, made a brief speech, simply bidding us welcome to Stamford. After the battalion had reached the wharf and were drawn up in line, Rev. WM. C. HOYT, one of the Burgesses, tendered a more formal welcome to the Ninth Regiment in behalf of the Warden and Borough authorities. A procession was then formed in the following manner:

Borough Police.
Warden and Burgesses in Carriages.
Citizens' Committee in Carriages.
Invited Guests of the Regiment in Carriages.
Grafulla's Full Band.
The Members of the Regiment in Companies.
Citizens in Carriages.
Citizens on Foot.

The procession proceeded in regular order from the steamboat landing to the town, and after moving through several of the principal streets, the regiment was halted in West Park, and welcomed in an eloquent address by Mr. J. M. OLMSTEAD, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee. The members of the command were then escorted through Main-street to Concert Hall, which they entered and stacked arms, being immediately dismissed in order to prepare for the dinner provided for them by the authorities. Several spacious tables were spread in Seely's Hall, on which was served a bounteous collation, the wands receiving full justice at the hands of the boys.

The reception of the battalion was most enthusiastic on the part of the citizens of Stamford, and the excursionists were most agreeably impressed by the appearance of this beautiful little town. As we passed through the place the many handsome and aristocratic residences visible on the route spoke well for the taste and refinement of the residents, Stamford is in reality a suburb of New-York, as here reside many of our leading citizens, who seek relief from the heat and turmoil of the Metropolis in these cool and pleasant avenues.

As soon as General WILCOX and his associate officers of the Ninth Regiment were relieved from their commands, the authorities of the town carried them and the representatives of the New-York Press in carriages to the country seat of ALEXANDER MCKENZIE, Esq., an old New-York merchant, who had tendered his genial hospitalities to the officers, he being an old officer of the New-York State Militia, and, as such, deeply interested in the welfare of the State service.

Mr. MCKENZIE proved himself a prince in hospitality, and all the gentlemen present enjoyed the festivities at his elegant villa with the utmost delight and pleasure. Appropriate toasts were drank by the company in bumpers of champagne, and responses were made by General WILCOX, General VARIAN, Mr. MCKENZIE, Captain PHILLIPS, and others. The reception was a very pleasant and hospitable one, the guests leaving the residence of their host with much regret, greeted as they were by the smiles of many beautiful ladies.

Scarcely had the officers arrived at the Stamford House, kept by that genial host Mr. G. SPENCER, than they were escorted to the spacious dining-room of the hotel, where they found themselves seated at a well-spread table, and made to partake of the hospitality of the entertainer. Enthusiastic speeches of welcome and response were made by Mr. OLMSTEAD and the officers of the regiment, besides addresses by Colonel REMMEY, Major BLAUVELT and General VARIAN. The company finally broke up in great humor, and entertaining the warmest feelings of friendship for each other.

GRAFULLA'S fine band then accorded the citizens the unwonted pleasure of listening to some exquisite music, their al fresco concert being well attended and rapturously received. A dress parade and review of the regiment subsequently took place at West Park before the Board of Burgesses, the details of the ceremony being correctly carried out. The review drew together a large crowd of the citizens, who seemed to have made a complete holiday of the day, and the ceremony passed off with considerable éclat.

The review being over, the officers and members prepared themselves for the ball to be given in their honor at Seely's Hall, and as I write the present lines the soft strains of the band are wafted to my open window, giving abundant token that the dancers are having a splendid time. My last view of the ball-room, a few moments since, was a most agreeable one, for I noticed that nearly all the leading citizens of Stamford were present, accompanied by their blooming wives and beautiful daughters.

Too much praise cannot be given to the Stamford people for their enthusiastic reception of the Ninth Regiment, and it is but justice to say that much of the success they have achieved is due to Mr. WILLIAM W. GILLESPIE, the editor of the Stamford Advocate, who has been untiring in his efforts as Secretary of the Committee of Citizens. Your correspondent is especially indebted to him for favors received.

The members of the American Club came this afternoon in full force, headed by Admiral TWEED. They received the officers and men of the Ninth Regiment in their room at the Stamford House in a most jovial manner. With songs and glees and plenty of champagne the party had a most jolly time, and after these festivities the American boys joined the dancers in the ball-room, where they took active part in the festivities.

MIDNIGHT.—As I have already written yes, the ball was a genuine and decided success, and it was with great regret that the boys of the Ninth parted from their hospitable entertainers a few moments ago. Before this reaches you by telegraph the steamer will have started on her homeward trip, and we anticipate an early return to New-York. G. P. W.

Methodist Camp Meeting at Plainfield, N. J.

The camp meeting of the Paterson district of the Methodist Protestant Church, which had been in progress at Plainfield, N. J., since Thursday last, closed yesterday morning. The place at which the meeting was held was Short Hill Woods, a pleasant grove situated one mile south of the Plainfield Depot. It was conducted under the direction of Rev. Dr. BAKER, President of the New-York Conference, and was attended from the commencement to the last day of the meeting by a large concourse of the members of the church and the people of Plainfield and the adjoining towns and villages. Seventeen tents were occupied by parties from the district under charge of the Paterson district. On Sunday the attendance was larger than at any other time during the progress of the meeting, about ten thousand persons were present, and the day was somewhat remarkable for its order, solemnity and attention to the service. Rev. Dr. BAKER of New-York, Rev. J. B. LORD, and Rev. Mr. ROBINSON of Paterson, preached in the morning, afternoon and evening, and, as usual, religious fervor marked the conduct of the listeners. The closing sermon on Monday evening was delivered by Rev. Mr. HUMPHREY of New-York. A large number of persons professed conversion during the meeting, and the results were extremely gratifying to its conductors.

SING SING PRISON.

The Recent Disorders There—Judge Cochrane's Charge to the Grand Jury of Westchester County.

In concluding his charge to the Grand Jury of Westchester County, in Bedford, last Monday, Judge COCHRANE, after alluding to the insufficiency of the accommodations at the Westchester County Jail, where prisoners of both sexes and of all ages and degrees of crime are confined in the same apartment, said:

It is an important part of the administration of criminal justice to see that the places provided by law for the detention of criminals are properly conducted—conducted with all humanity toward those incarcerated, and, at the same time, with due regard to the security and comfort of the community at large, which has been outraged by the acts of those thus incarcerated; and while a very large share of the attention of those having charge of criminals confined in prison should be devoted to their reformation, the carrying out of the sentence of the law with due severity should not be overlooked. I make these remarks because it is a matter of public notoriety that the Sing Sing Prison is not now so conducted as to insure the safe custody of the criminals sent there. Within the past few months a number of the convicts have escaped, some of whom have been recaptured, but many of whom remain at large. It is to be presumed that the officers of that prison, so far as their jurisdiction permits, have made every effort to retake the fugitives; but it may not be generally known that to break prison and escape is a felony subject to severe punishment at the hands of the Court; and I charge you to inquire into all cases where prisoners have escaped in order that they may be indicted and brought here, and, if they are not returned, that a bench warrant may issue according to law, and they be sentenced, the sentence to take effect at the expiration of their original term of imprisonment. I think it would also be proper for you to inquire into the recent strikes and mutinies among the convicts in that prison, and to determine, if you can, in the interest of public justice and public security, the cause of those outbreaks. Various causes are alleged in the public prints, some of them reflecting injuriously upon the officers of the prison. The officers say that there is not a sufficient number of guards for the prison, and that under former administrations the discipline had become so lax that when they attempted to reform it the convicts revolted, in the hope that they could control them to allow things to remain as they were. The public should know what has brought about the present state of affairs at Sing Sing Prison, and what steps are necessary to correct these evils in the future. If the officers of the prison are capable and diligent, it is due to them that their fault should be made clear; but if they are derelict in their duty, and aid and abet in the escape of prisoners, or are so culpably negligent as to render escape easy, they are guilty of a misdemeanor, and should be indicted and brought here for trial. I do not think you can discharge a higher public duty than by patiently investigating these important subjects.

Singular Accident on the New-Jersey Railroad.

A remarkable accident occurred on the New-Jersey Railroad at Newark last evening. It was fortunately unattended with fatal results, but the narrowness of the escape from loss of life causes a horrible reflection on the dangers that attend railroad traveling. In this case there was no broken rail, no misplaced switch, no flaw, no curve; but a locomotive drawing a train heavily freighted with passengers, leaped from a smooth and straight track while running at a rapid rate. The train which left Jersey City at 6 o'clock was passing the Centre-street Depot in Newark at a speed of about twenty miles an hour. As the locomotive passed the south end of the depot, it turned upon the switch to take the left-hand track. The train came to a sudden stop, and the engine was found to be off the track, with its front against the shed, at a distance of ten or twelve feet from the track which the wheels had left. The cars remained upon the track. An examination of the track showed the marks of the locomotive wheels upon the "frog," in passing through which they had been thrown from the track. But there was no sign of any obstruction, and there could be found no defect in the wheels by which the accident could have been caused. It seemed to be one of those unaccountable mishaps for which no person could be blamed, and which no precaution could prevent.

The spot at which the locomotive finally stopped was about forty feet down the road at which it jumped the track. It was turned toward the right. Had it taken an opposite direction the results might have been disastrous, for upon that side was a precipitate descent toward the river. The hedge row of buildings which border the line, opposite the depot stops here, leaving an open declivity.

The trains following this one and those coming from Elizabeth could not pass the obstructed spot for three hours after the accident took place. Passengers were compelled to walk, and baggage was transferred from one depot to the other, and after two hours' delay those who were detained were carried to their destination upon trains made up on either side.

Women's Suffrage Association.

The weekly meeting of this Association yesterday afternoon was occupied with the reading and consideration of reports.

Mrs. BLAKE, from the Committee on Lectures, reported that arrangements were to be made to hold a lecturing campaign throughout the country in behalf of women suffrage. It would commence on Nov. 1, and be conducted by such lecturers as GEO. W. CURTIS, H. W. BEECHER, ANNA DICKINSON, Mrs. STANTON and other champions of the cause.

Mrs. WILBOUR, of the Executive Committee, presented a proposition to the meeting that certain of its members be delegated to organize State, county and town associations, and be duly compensated for their work. Adopted.

Mrs. NORTON read an appeal from Mrs. GAGE to the women of New-York State in favor of the suffrage movement, which closed with the announcement that a convention similar to the one which recently met at Saratoga would be held at Newport, Aug. 26 and 27, at which Mrs. STANTON, Mrs. C. C. BURLEIGH, Miss ANTHONY and a host of other lights would make addresses.

The following is the form of a petition to which names are to be solicited. The Equal Rights Association will soon circulate one like it:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The undersigned citizens of the State of New-York, ask for the prompt passage by your honorable bodies of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to be submitted to the Legislatures of the several States for ratification, which shall secure to all citizens the right of suffrage without distinction of sex.

The Newark and Paterson Railroad.

Workmen are now busily engaged in constructing a new road between Newark and Paterson, in New-Jersey. The road has already been completed to Woodside. It is proposed to make the rates of commutation over the new route such that it will be cheaper to travel from Woodside to Paterson, and thence by the Erie Railroad to the Pavonia Ferry, in Jersey City, than it at present is to travel from Woodside to Newark by the horse cars, and thence into Jersey City over the New-Jersey Railroad.

The line of the road lies through the beautiful valley of the Passaic. From the depot at Newark northward rails have been placed upon piles driven along the river bank under the cemetery front. This work, 3,000 feet in length, costs not less than $36,000.

As soon as the road shall have been completed a couple of sleeping cars, already completed, it is said, at a cost of about $20,000, will be placed upon the line to connect with through Western lines.

A branch road is to be constructed from Newark Depot to a point on the Erie Railroad.

A Through Car to the Pacific Ocean.

The next best thing to traveling to San Francisco in a Pullman palace car, is a trip to the Hudson River Depot to inspect the one which ran through from the Golden Gate last week. It is on exhibition there previous to its departure for another through trip on Saturday next, and if one wishes to obtain a clear idea of the luxury of modern travel, he should by all means take a look at the Wabash. By paying a small sum, 25c. extra, one can start in a Pullman palace at the Atlantic, dine en route on all the luxuries which the temperate zone produces, sleep on down, or what is far better this weather, on a superior spring mattress, and land a week later on the Pacific, refreshed and invigorated, and with a very profound contempt for those who ride in common chariots, or the old-style sleeping coaches of a year or two ago.

Children for the West.

The regular fortnightly dispatch of destitute children left the offices of the Children's Aid Society yesterday, to be provided with homes and employment in the States of Illinois and Ohio. The company was chiefly composed of orphan boys, whose only means of obtaining a livelihood has been peddling small wares and blacking boots, supplemented by the charity received at the Society's lodging-house. It numbered some of the sized chest would follow in the same direction it would be a blessing both to the City and themselves.

THE VERMELAND CASE.

Alleged Kidnapping of a Female Witness.

Yesterday was the time appointed for the examination in the case of GEORGE VERMELAND, who is accused of having abandoned his wife shortly after their marriage. The examination was continued at Essex Market Police Court some weeks ago, but has been postponed on several occasions. The last postponement occurred about two weeks ago, and was granted on an affidavit made by the defendant's son, which represented that the defendant was unable to be present, being too ill to leave his residence in New-Jersey. Since that time it has been claimed that the alleged illness was only a subterfuge to enable the defendant to procure another postponement of the case.

When the name of the defendant was called yesterday he failed to make his appearance, which caused lively comments among the spectators. Subsequently a writ of certiorari was served on Justice MANSFIELD, requiring him to answer before Judge CARDOZO on Monday next. It appears that it was granted on the ground that he has no jurisdiction over the defendant's suit, the latter being a non-resident of this City. Under these circumstances no testimony was elicited, although Mr. SUMNER, counsel for the complainant, was very anxious to go on. It transpired in connection with the case that an attempt had been made to injure the cause of the prosecution by imprisoning one of their most important witnesses.

It was said that a young girl named DELIA GILL, who was to furnish evidence concerning the marriage between the complainant and defendant, was induced to enter a carriage at the corner of Eighth-avenue and Twenty-seventh-street by an unknown man, on the 16th inst., on the pretence that she was wanted by Mr. SUMNER, complainant's counsel. The carriage subsequently conveyed her to Brooklyn, stopping before a large brick building. She alighted, and was then taken into a small and unfurnished room on the third floor, where she was kept in a state of confinement for two days. She was released on making an oath that she would not appear in the case, but would immediately leave the City.

Velocipede Exhibition.

The mania for velocipede riding has not entirely died out. Last evening there was a grand exhibition given at the Crosby-street Velocipede Academy, in which a number of expert riders connected with the various theatres of the City participated. The Olympic Theatre Bicycle Club were present, and also the popular lady velocipedists, Miss KATIE KAVANAGH, Miss LIZZIE HOWARD and Mlle. LOTTIE.

The exhibition opened with a grand entrée by Messrs. Sutton, Ravel, Soitrec, Wilson, Shellhase, McCoombs and Dorney.

Miss KAVANAGH exhibited her skill on the bicycle, and an even race came off between W. C. RAVEL and E. M. FELIX, both making the half mile in 1:42. Miss HOWARD received hearty applause for her riding. The entire programme was well performed, and the exhibition proved to be a success. It was for the benefit of J. B. HOWLAND, an actor of the Olympic Theatre.

Compared with the number of velocipede halls opened in the Spring, there are now but few patronized. Some have become the resort of roughs who monopolize the floor, and those who are respectable are but thinly attended. As a practical conveyance the velocipede has proved itself of little value, while as a source of amusement or exercise its use cannot be general. The excitement which followed their introduction here has almost completely subsided, and numerous manufactories have consequently been laboring under the load of too many machines on hand. The field is now open to the next "rage."

The Fraud Game—A $2,000 Robbery.

LIZZIE MULLIGAN was last evening arrested by Officer DOYLE, of the Fifteenth Ward Police, on the charge of participating in the theft of a $1,000 United States gold bond, $550 in United States greenbacks, and three $20 gold checks, the property of JAMES JOHNSON, now residing at the St. John's Hotel, in Broadway. From JOHNSON's story, it appears that he met LIZZIE on the street and accompanied her to a house in North-avenue, near Tenth-street, where they both for the time occupied the same room. JOHNSON placed his coat and vest on a table behind the head of the bed, the table being hidden from his view while he was lying on the couch. Near the table was a bedding in a half broken trunk, and this was evidently used by the thief; for while JOHNSON was lying on the bed he heard a noise, and on attempting to rise was prevented by LIZZIE, from whose hold he ultimately broke in time to find that the above-mentioned property had been taken from the pocket of JOHNSON's vest. JOHNSON attempted to pursue the thieves through the door leading to the hall, but found it fast, and therefore caused the arrest of LIZZIE, who was locked up in the Mercer-street Police Station.

The Mott Haven Counterfeiters.

The case of ROBERT HERRING, JOSEPH PROVANO and VINCENT LORENZO, who were arrested on a charge of counterfeiting and circulating United States money, came up before Commissioner OSBORN yesterday for examination. HERRING, the manufacturer and seller of the bogus money, having admitted his guilt and professing his willingness to give all the assistance he could in the prosecution, was used as a witness for the Government. The testimony went to show that LORENZO purchased $5,000 worth of counterfeits on the Jewitt City National Bank for $50. He obtained them from HERRING. He subsequently transferred them to one LOW, who in turn gave them to Detective DEY. The Commissioner decided to hold LORENZO for trial. It said that the prisoner was employed as a barber at the Fifth-avenue Hotel.

Meeting of the Newark Tailors' Union.

A meeting of the Tailors' Union was held at Sternkopf's Hall, Broome-street, Newark, on Monday evening. The Central Union of New-York was present, and stated that the bill of prices would be presented to all the New-York houses to-day, and that it provided a rise of 25 per cent. A letter of the Central Committee was reported to the effect that any men who refused to accept the proposition a strike would be declared at once. The Newark Union also resolved to attend the presentation of the resolution to the various New-York houses. The Newark Union has over 100 members, and an effort will be made to increase the number of members. Three thousand tailors are at present employed in Newark, and the members hope to increase their numbers.

Shortening the Distance to Staten Island.

A matter of special importance to merchants of New-York having their residences on Staten Island, and to the public generally, is assuming definite shape, and the necessary measures have been taken to connect Staten Island with New-York by the most rapid and direct communication possible, by means of a ferry to Ellis Island and thence by the construction of a railroad on a trestle-bridge with a draw, over the Kill von Kull to New-Brighton. The road will then be extended to Tottenville, and by means of a tunnel at Fort Amboy connect with the Camden and Amboy Railroad.

Army Reunion at Gettysburg.

The projected reunion of officers of both the Union and Confederate armies, who fought the battle of Gettysburg, is to be held on the battle-field, on Wednesday, Aug. 4. This meeting is called by the Gettysburg Memorial Society, for the purpose of permanently locating the positions of the two armies during the various stages of that battle. A large number of officers will attend, and Colonel MACHELDER, the historian of Gettysburg, accompanied by Messrs. CHAPPELL and WALKER, the well-known artists, will also be present. The occasion will be one of considerable interest.

Reddy the Blacksmith in California.

Superintendent KENNEDY yesterday received a dispatch to the effect that WILLIAM VARLEY, better known as "Reddy the Blacksmith," had arrived in San Francisco, having taken refuge in California after slipping his bail in this City in the Lawrence-Graham case. The Superintendent sent on a dispatch that the authorities should hold "Reddy" until a requisition could be sent out overland, when doubtless he will be brought on to the City for trial.

Sudden Death of the President of the National Labor Union.

Mr. SYLVIS has, for twenty years, been one of the leading minds in the great labor movement in the United States. His death was caused by congestion of the bowels.

The Order of the Seven Wise Men.

From the Philadelphia Age, July 27.

The Supreme Conclave of the Order of the "Seven Wise Men," will meet in this city to-day. Delegates will be present from about five hundred Conclaves.

The following officers will officiate: Anthony Bamhola, of New-Orleans, La., Supreme Anchor; Dr. Geo. P. Oliver, of Philadelphia, Counselor; Wm. Grieve, of Yellowstone, Supreme Provost; C. Frietsch, of Ohio, Supreme Priests; Wm. Fitzgerald, of New-Orleans, La., Supreme Scribe; T. P. Lockwood, of Mississippi, Supreme Treasurer; J. Metzgar, of Alabama, Supreme Herald; E. D. Langley, of Virginia, Supreme Inspector-General; E. Heidinschuder, of Louisiana, Supreme Guide; Wm. Gerhold, Supreme Warder; G. Cucaulla, of Louisiana, Supreme Sentinel.

This Order was introduced in New-York and Philadelphia in 1850 by the institution of Goethe Conclave No. 17, and in New-York probably in 1857 by the institution of a Conclave by Mr. GOLDSMITH, who received his degree in Washington Conclave No. 4, New-Orleans. The Order was subsequently placed in the hands of ELIAS EPSTEIN, who opened two Conclaves and rewrote the German rituals, showing much ability.

Owing to causes of a local nature, the New-York Conclaves disbanded or merged into other societies. Those in Philadelphia, as soon as they numbered four, went independent. They formed what is called the Independent Order of S. W., which soon extended again, and now numbers planted itself in New-York, where, in 1866, they had seven Conclaves, and now probably many more. They all work the Egyptian ritual somewhat modified, and have extended to several parts of the country, carrying on all their proceedings in German. They probably number now some seventy-five Conclaves in all, with a few bodies called Cumulluma, conferring higher degrees.

The revival of the Order in Philadelphia, under the regular jurisdiction, was owing to two members, HORATIO SEWELL, who conceived the idea of forming a Conclave of the Order in English, and applied to the authorities of the Independent Order, but was informed that they restricted their subordinates to the German language. In the course of his inquiries he learned the origin of the Order, and wrote to a lecturer to the Order, from whom he obtained a charter for Keystone Conclave, No. 1, which worked for a time, but became dormant, owing to the absence for a time of Brother SEWELL from Philadelphia.

In 1867, Dr. GEO. P. OLIVER, a member of Keystone Conclave, No. 1, of the Independent Order, became acquainted with the true origin of the Order, of which he had been unaware at his initiation. He also conferred with Brother DE CRUSAT, and others, who had formed a similar connection before being aware of their position. They opened a correspondence with the Supreme Archon, who referred them to Brother SEWELL. The result was the revival of Keystone Conclave, No. 1, and the formation of several new ones.

The Argentine Republic—The Difficulties of the New President.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, July 27.

Private letters from reliable sources in Buenos Ayres inform us that the new President of the Republic finds it a difficult task to make a republican Government understood by the Spanish race, although their aspirations are for liberty. Some time since the Governor of the Province of San Juan put the Legislature into prison. President SARMIENTO, in obedience to the clause of the Constitution which declares, like our own, that "the Federal Government guarantees to every State a republican form of government," &c., restored the Legislature to power. The first Congress that has convened since he took the office, and which is chiefly composed of the partisans and friends of Ex-President MITRE, (who has been elected Senator for nine years by the Legislature of his province) is taking President SARMIENTO to task for this just exercise of his prerogative. MITRE seems determined to oppose the action of President SARMIENTO. Formerly companions in exile, in arms, and in efforts for their country's liberation from tyrants, the love of power apparently has corrupted the Ex-President, who now opposes his old friend in his efforts to govern well and peacefully. This is extraordinary action in a man of his supposed enlightenment, and must be a cruel thorn to the noble SARMIENTO. We hope to have more detailed intelligence of the affair in San Juan, but it seems a very plain case for interference, as he has done, with State rights. The President of the Argentine Republic finds nothing more difficult than to adjust this question of State rights. Some of its chief difficulties have formerly arisen from too great usurpation of power by the Central Government, as in the case mentioned in the life of Colonel SARMIENTO,

To the Editor of the Chicago Evening Journal:

Last week—date forgotten—your paper brought a city item that a Mr. ALEXANDER BAUGLEY was serious affected by a singular disease, which at first was pronounced by his physician as erysipelas, but finally it was decided that the disease was caused by wearing poisonous socks, which were imported from France. The Journal of last evening, again contained an item, copied from the NEW-YORK TIMES, regarding "poisonous socks," &c. Allow me, Sir, to state that some months since Dr. TARDIEU, of Paris, presented before the Academy of Medicine the history of several cases which came under his observation, and which cases at first were also incorrectly diagnosed erysipelas, &c. The doctor, not satisfied with his diagnosis, and the remedies applied not affecting the result he anticipated, paid his attention to the socks which his patients had been in the habit of wearing. The socks were of violet color, with round red stripes, and were imported from England. A chemical analysis showed that the violet color was produced by aniline, and the red by coralline. The Doctor then, in conjunction with Dr. BOUSSIN, instituted a number of physiological experiments in order to ascertain the effects of this toxical substance. By means of hypodermic injections they introduced under the skin of dogs, rabbits and frogs very minute portions of coralline. The results were that the animals died in from two to four days.

This is not the place to enter at length into details of the doctor's experiments, and the results derived therefrom. Suffice it to say, that Drs. TARDIEU and BOUSSIN considered coralline as one of the most violent irritating poisons, and they urge that the same should be entirely banished in manufactures. Respectfully yours,

DR. JAEGER.
